DUBLIN, Sept. 19.—A pitched battle was fought between the military and police on one hand and Sinn Feiners on the other in the mountains near Enniskerry, in North Wicklow, this morning. It came to the knowledge of the authorities that the district, which is less than fifteen miles south of Dublin and within easy reach of the coast of Bray, was used as a training ground for "Republican volunteers." A surprise was therefore planned and the coup carried out with successful results.

Unknown to the volunteers, a large number of troops was rapidly concentrated in the district, being conveyed from a distance in a fleet of about twelve motor lorries. Quick reconnaissance revealed a band of armed men drilling and doing bombing practice in a field, with an officer in charge.

The troops determined to arrest them, and by some surreptitious manoeuvring they were surrounded by a force much superior to their own, but despite the odds against them the Sinn Feiners offered resistance. When the attacking troops approached a short and sharp fight ensued, in which bombs were thrown and rifle firing engaged in until at length more than forty Sinn Feiners laid down their arms in token of surrender.

One of their number had been killed and several were wounded. In the fight the troops and police had the assistance of an armored car. The captured men were placed under arrest and accompanied by soldiers in motor lorries to barracks.

BELFAST, Sept. 19.—With twenty automobiles captured from week-end pleasure seekers, Sinn Feiners in Mid-Tyrone on Saturday carried out one of the biggest raids for arms in the history of Ireland.

Early in the afternoon, when large numbers of persons were starting on week-end tours, a body of men armed with revolvers stationed themselves at the entrance to Gortin Glenns, a favorite drive, and held up all motor cars, the passengers being sent to the farmhouses adjacent.

When twenty machines had been captured a gang of 100 masked men, all heavily armed and led by an officer, descended from the adjoining mountainside and entered the cars, the drivers of which, with revolvers at their heads, were compelled to drive the raiders around the country, visiting houses in search of arms.

LIMERICK, Sept. 19.—A constabulary patrol was ambuscaded near Abbeyfeale today. Constable Mahoney was killed and the chief constable and another constable were wounded.

MACSWINEY UNCHANGED.

Conscious After 38 Days of Fast—Sends Message to All Irishmen.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The condition of Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork, was reported as practically unchanged in three bulletins issued today by the Irish Self-Determination League, although he appeared somewhat refreshed by two hours' sleep during the night.

This evening's bulletin, given out by the league after Mrs. MacSwiney's daily visit to her husband, said: "He is extremely weak, but still conscious."

Considerable talk was occasioned today by a paragraph appearing in The Sunday Times under the head "Who is feeding Mr. MacSwiney?" It says: "Everybody is asking who is feeding him. There is no doubt at all that the Government is not giving him food, or any of the prison officials. It is suggested that his visitors, priests and relatives, are giving him sufficient food to keep him alive."

Pointing out that MacSwiney and the Cork hunger strikers have virtually equaled Dr. Tanner's forty days' fast, The Sunday Times asks how the first twelve men to be found—Mayor MacSwiney and the eleven in Cork—when they tried to go without food could equal Dr. Tanner's record, which excited the wonder of the world.

In reply to this, Art O'Brien, of the Irish Self-Determination League, said tonight: "No nourishment or food of any kind is being given to the Lord Mayor."

MacSwiney will send the following message tomorrow on behalf of himself and the hunger strikers in Cork jail to Irishmen throughout the world, thanking them for their sympathy and prayers, according to the Daily Mail:

"To-morrow I shall have completed forty days without tasting food, and, though lying here helpless, my faculties are as clear as ever. I attribute this

Ten Big Industries Report Fewer Employes in August

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Ten out of fourteen representative industries showed a decrease in the number of employes on the payroll in August, as compared with July, the Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics reported in an industrial survey made public today. Figures on which the comparison was made were obtained from identical establishments.

The number of employes in the automobile manufacturing industry decreased 10 per cent. in August, compared with July. Other large decreases were 6 per cent. in the woolen industry and 5 per cent. in the leather, hosiery and underwear industries. Increases of 3.5 per cent. and 1.5 per cent. were shown in car building and repairing and in paper making.

As compared with July, the payrolls in August showed decreases in nine industries and increases in five.

KNAPP INVESTIGATES HAITI BANK SNARL

Admiral Sent Down to Straighten Out Trouble Involving National City's Interests.

ITS PRIVILEGES CONTESTED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Admiral Harry S. Knapp, retired, of the United States Navy, has been sent to Haiti on a diplomatic and political mission for the Government in an effort to bring about an adjustment between the Haitian Government, the Banco National, the stock of which was recently acquired by the National City Bank of New York, and other conflicting interests there, and, if possible, to improve political and financial conditions in the republic. Admiral Knapp reported his arrival in Haiti several days ago.

Gen. John A. Lejeune, Commandant of the Marine Corps, has also been in Haiti for two weeks, but his mission is to inspect the American force of occupation and report to Secretary Daniels. General Lejeune will sift all the allegations of "slavery" and other charges made against the marines. Admiral Knapp, while a naval officer, has been sent to Haiti more as a representative of the State Department than of the Navy Department.

The situation which brought about the dispatch of Admiral Knapp grew out of a desire in some quarters in Haiti to eliminate foreign interests from the National Bank of Haiti. The control of the Banco Nacional had been acquired by the National City Bank of New York through purchase of French interests.

This acquisition, it was learned from a high official source tonight, has led to reports that the National City Bank had seized the resources of Haiti, when, according to the opinion expressed in this same quarter, the National City Bank had been rather generous in its action in a difficult situation.

Dispute Over Bank Transfer.

As explained in an official quarter tonight, the Haitian Government long before the American marines were sent there in 1915, granted a charter to the Banco Nacional, which was owned by French interests. Under this charter the Nacional became a bank for the issuance of money, the Government deposited its funds in the bank and paid to the bank interest at the rate of 3 per cent. on these deposits.

Recently the National City Bank of New York was persuaded to buy the stock of these French interests in the Banco Nacional and thus acquired the rights and privileges that went with the stock.

Objections were raised against the passing of the control of the Banco Nacional to the National City Bank and it is understood that another institution, the Royal Bank of Canada, was displeased with the transactions.

Reports that a delegation of Haitians had come to Washington to protest could not be confirmed tonight. A high official of the State Department said he knew of no such delegation, and the same statement was made by officials of the Navy Department.

The foregoing and other aspects of the financial problem in Haiti, however, have aroused feeling in some circles in Haiti, and there are other elements of the situation which resulted in the decision of Secretaries Colby and Daniels to send Admiral Knapp to Haiti to look into the situation.

One privilege which was enjoyed by the Banco Nacional, that of charging the Haitian Government 3 per cent. interest for its deposit of funds in the bank, figured in the present conflict of views in Haiti. Colonel McIlhenny, American financial adviser to the Haitian Government, is opposed to the payment of this interest.

Whatever the rights that have been conveyed to the National City Bank through the purchase of stock in the Banco Nacional, it can be asserted on the authority of information obtained from a high official quarter tonight that the National City Bank has no powers in the matter of Haitian finances conferred upon it by the United States Government. Such rights and powers as the National City Bank enjoys, it was explained by an official, were those

REPUBLICANS WARY OF DENYING SEATS TO FIVE SOCIALISTS

Judge Miller and National Leaders Are Said to Have Cautioned Sweet.

WAY TO AVOID ONUS SOUGHT

HOUSING BILL NOT READY

Neither Governor Smith Nor Senator Lockwood Indicates What Relief Will Be Proposed.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 19.—Whether the five New York City Socialists, ousted from the State Assembly last session and re-elected to their seats last week, will again be expelled from the Legislature was tonight apparently an open question with few legislators in town for the convening of the special session tomorrow night.

As far as could be ascertained, there seems little likelihood of formal action on the part of the Republican majority in the House to force the question of expulsion. This position is said to have been dictated largely by the Republican nominee for Governor, Nathan L. Miller, and by Republicans in high standing nationally. The Republican attitude was said tonight to be in favor of allowing the same member of the Democratic minority to take the initiative, and if this plan is followed the Socialists will be permitted to take their oath of office and be seated, at least temporarily.

Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier of Manhattan, Democrat, has announced his intention of demanding that the Socialists be again expelled. This action, if followed, will be to the liking of the Republican majority's present plans, of seeking to relieve themselves of the onus of expelling the Socialists.

There is also a possibility that the Assembly might compromise by refusing to challenge the right of Assemblymen Orr and De Witt to sit, but expelling the others, Solomon, Claessens and Waldman, whom the Judiciary Committee declared in the original expulsion proceedings to be more open to censure than Orr and De Witt. This plan is regarded by some legislators as the most feasible, because of recent changes in the Socialist Party constitution, which are said to meet many of the charges of disloyalty made in the Assembly.

Political Advantage Dominates.

Political advantage is dominating the decision leaders will make. The Republican majority, particularly, is wary of a political boomerang that would affect national and State candidates, and for this reason, coupled with the views of National Committeemen and Judge Miller, are proceeding cautiously and declining to state their position.

A decision on definite action with regard to the membership of the Socialists will be made at a conference tomorrow of the legislative leaders. Action was to have been taken tonight, but Speaker Sweet of the Assembly, the majority leader of the Senate, J. Henry Walters, and other leaders were too late in arriving.

Speaker Sweet declined tonight to say what action might be taken on the question, which tonight seems to overshadow even the housing problem, for which the Legislature was reconvened.

"I cannot say anything at all about the Socialists' matter," he said. "There will be a conference of the leaders tomorrow at which, undoubtedly, the question will come up."

Among the few legislators who arrived today for the extraordinary session, there is a wide divergence of opinion as to whether the Socialists should be seated or not.

Governor Writing His Message.

Although the Legislature meets tomorrow night, the housing bills which were to have been prepared by the Lockwood committee have not been printed, and, while they may be ready for submission to the lawmakers at the opening of the session, there is no certainty that a finished bill will be ready.

The committee, which has been in Albany for several days, expected to be ready to submit a draft of the bill to Governor Smith tonight. However, this was not done. Governor Smith was busy at the mansion writing his special message, which will be read in both houses tomorrow night. No hint of what the message would contain was obtainable.

The Governor has been urged to take up many subjects, and, while he has listened to all of the requests and has read all of the several hundred letters submitted to him bearing on the subject, he has declined to commit himself.

It is hoped that there may be a session of the Lockwood committee tomorrow morning at the Ten Eyck, but this may be postponed until the afternoon or early evening, in case the members do not arrive.

Senator Lockwood was reported to be out of the city tonight, and at his hotel it was said no one knew when he would return. Inquiry for him at the Executive Mansion brought the answer that he was not there.

The few legislators who did reach Albany tonight said they had no information concerning the housing bill. The committee plan will no doubt be first submitted, and then, if any of the members desire to add anything to the bills, they will be given an opportunity.

In all probability there will be a public hearing on the bill or bills which

Test of 'Moon-Going' Rocket Promised Within a Month

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 19.—Professor Robert H. Goddard, inventor of the "moon-going" rocket, announces that within a month, if all conditions continue to be favorable, his first experimental rocket will make its ascent. Dr. Goddard in an interview said:

"The present tests are being made for the purpose of demonstrating that successive charges can be fired in this way in an apparatus that is practicable. No attempt is being made to obtain a great altitude, to make the proportion of powder large, or to construct a large apparatus, for the simple reason that the funds available from the Smithsonian Institution will permit the completion of only a small model of about six pounds weight, with a capacity of about sixty charges, with no attempt to attain great lightness of construction.

"The important point is that the demonstration of such a device as this will remove the possibility of any doubt as to the practicability of the method and also as to the possibility of attaining as great altitude as can be desired. This is, of course, understood by those who have been financing the work.

"The chief reason why the work is proceeding slowly is the lack of adequate support."

CITY HOUSING LOANS AUTHORIZED IN BILL

HYLAN PROGRAM TO ALBANY

Tax Exemptions to Encourage Building—Office of Housing Director Asked.

City loans for building to relieve the housing crisis to be made from a municipal building loan trust fund raised by the sale of city bonds and the creation of the office of municipal housing commissioner are the principal features of the city's program on housing legislation which was submitted yesterday by Mayor Hylan to Senator Charles G. Lockwood, Chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee on Housing, on the eve of the special legislative session at Albany.

The city's program is embodied in five bills, which were drawn by Corporation Counsel John P. O'Brien and which, Mayor Hylan says in a letter to Senator Lockwood, "are designed to afford some measure of relief in the housing crisis now confronting the city." Four of the five bills relate to the loan project and the other to the proposed office of housing commissioner.

The series of bills was worked out by Commissioner Frank Mann of the Tenement House Department, in collaboration with Alanson Briggs and the Corporation Counsel. Commissioner Mann, in a letter to the Mayor, says that the plan is to put the money of the sinking fund to use in giving relief in the housing situation.

"I do not claim for this measure that it is a panacea to cure all the housing ills," says Mr. Mann in his letter, "but I firmly believe that it will work out in practice in a manner to give substantial relief."

Outline of the Five Bills.

The five bills suggested by the city are:

1. A bill to provide for relief in an emergency existing in the City of New York due to lack of housing and to enable the City of New York to provide means to encourage the construction of new dwellings, apartments and tenement houses in said city during said emergency.

2. A bill amending Section 205 of the Greater New York Charter and authorizing the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund to invest Sinking Fund moneys in the bonds authorized by the bill numbered "1."

3. A bill amending the Greater New York Charter by adding Section 2050, authorizing the commissioners of the Sinking Fund to create the office of "Housing Commissioner," to be appointed by the Mayor, and providing for employes and expenses.

4. A bill amending the general tax law by authorizing exemptions to be granted as consideration for relief to be performed under the bill numbered 1.

5. A bill amending the general business law by permitting a higher rate of interest to be charged in mortgages authorized by the bill numbered 1.

The amount of the building fund provided for by the first bill is not fixed.

O'Brien Explains Bills.

Corporation Counsel O'Brien summarized the bills as follows:

"Bill No. 1 declares that an emergency exists in this city, due to lack of housing, which threatens the life, health and safety of the inhabitants. It authorizes the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund to sell 6 per cent. fifteen-year building loan trust bonds, chargeable only against a special trust fund to be created, and not against the general credit of the city. This fund to be raised from the proceeds of sale of these bonds is to be loaned at any time during the next five years upon 7 per cent. fifteen-year mortgages upon property upon which the owners will agree to erect houses of the kind prescribed by the Commissioners at a cost to exceed by 20 per cent. the amount of the loan, thus making the incumbrance upon both land and building about 60 per cent. of the total value thereof. The Commissioners are also empowered to invest sinking fund moneys and the Chamber-

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 19.—Edwin P. Fischer left for New York tonight accompanied by Detective Sergeants O'Hara and McCoy of that city. He was under no restraint of any kind after leaving the Barton Street jail and chatted affably with the officers on the way to the train. He appeared to be calm and expressed a willingness to tell fully his reasons for sending to various people the postcard warning them of impending disaster in Wall Street.

He strongly resented the findings of the Hamilton Lunacy Court adjudging him insane, declaring that all he wanted was an opportunity to vindicate himself as to his lack of any connection with the plot that led to the Wall Street tragedy and to give proof of his sanity. It was as a sane man that he left the jail in so far as agreement among the officials with himself and his counsel could give him that status.

Tonight's climax to Fischer's detention in Hamilton followed a series of conferences held throughout the day. Fischer's counsel, T. R. Sloan, Magistrate Jelfs, H. S. Sweeney, the Canadian Immigration Inspector, and the United States officials from New York and Buffalo reached an understanding on the line of action to be taken. The upshot was that Sweeney waived his request for the deportation of Fischer as an undesirable if Fischer consented to go to New York at once. This Fischer readily agreed to on condition that he was allowed to leave this country as he entered it, that is as a sane man. As the only desire of the Canadian officials was to facilitate the efforts of the United States authorities to have him returned to New York they agreed to this, and Fischer is now on his way.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Edwin P. Fischer, returning voluntarily to New York to submit to questioning in connection with the notes he sent giving warning of the Wall Street explosion, arrived in Buffalo at 9 o'clock tonight from Hamilton, Ont., and left at 9:35 for New York. He was accompanied by two New York City detectives and an agent of the United States Department of Justice.

Although Fischer is not under arrest, the detectives and Department of Justice agents kept a close watch on him in the station here during the half hour wait. They said that he would probably be taken directly before the Grand Jury upon his arrival in New York tomorrow morning.

While in Buffalo Fischer was questioned about a report from Toronto that he had been identified as a man interned in Canada during the war as a German. Fischer laughed at the report and declared that he was an American-born citizen and had never been in an internment camp.

POLICE DOUBT FISCHER CAN GIVE ANY FACTS

He Will be Detained Nevertheless —Chemist's Wife Denies He Is Close Friend.

Although the authorities investigating the Wall Street explosion have expressed belief that Edwin P. Fischer had neither any connection with it nor any information that will be of value, both William J. Flynn of the Department of Justice and a representative of the District Attorney's office will examine him on his arrival from Canada here this morning. Fischer is being brought here in the custody of two agents of the Department of Justice. Assistant District Attorney Alfred J. Talley said last night over the telephone from Asbury Park, N. J., that if the Federal authorities did not want Fischer the District Attorney's office did and would make application to have him detained as a material witness.

Mr. Talley said officials of the Department of Justice had promised to give a representative of the District Attorney an opportunity to examine Fischer in any event. He said that he did not consider the possibility of Fischer's relatives attempting to put him in an asylum to be material, as that would not necessarily destroy his competency as a witness. There is no charge of implication in the crime against Fischer, he said, and insanity would only become material as a defense if there should be a charge. Even if Fischer should be judged insane,

Farrier Identifies Shoes of Bomb Truck Horse, But Fails to Recall Even Nationality of Owner

A horseshoer of forty years' experience identified the front shoes of the dead horse which drew the "death wagon" to Wall Street on Thursday, as two he had put on about two weeks ago, it was learned yesterday. To the disappointment of the police he could remember nothing about the driver who brought the animal to the shop of Finnegan & Kyle, at 85 New Chambers Street, where he has been employed three years.

The man is John Haggerty, living at Park Avenue and 169th Street, the Bronx, where he told a NEW YORK TIMES reporter last night that he found on the fore shoes the horizontal line just over the heel clip which he always has put on his handiwork as the sort of secret identification mark which all horseshoers use, largely for the purpose of knowing their own work in case of complaint. Haggerty is a non-union man and called attention to the absence of the "J. H. U." of the Journeyman Horseshoers' Union from the front shoes, though they were on the hind shoes.

He said he doubted if he could recognize the man who brought the animal to him, as he shod from eight to a dozen horses a day and nothing had attracted particular attention to this customer. He was sure he knew the horse, however, though when he examined its remains at the Health Department's offal dock, at the foot of West Thirtieth Street, he said he believed it had been clipped closely since he had handled it.

Haggerty called attention to the absence of all harnessmakers' or repairers' marks from the harness and the absence of any device on the blinders as strengthening his belief that a deliberate attempt had been made to disguise the whole outfit.

The man tried to remember the nationality of the customer, but failed even to do that. He thought the shoes he put on were used only a few days, and those on the hind hoofs even less.

The Finnegan & Kyle shop is not far from the Manhattan Bridge and the Fulton Street Ferry, and Haggerty's certainty that he shod the animal gave rise to speculation as to whether it might have been brought from Brooklyn. The anarchist circulars found when Judge C. C. Nott's home was bombed were printed in Fifth Avenue, that borough.

CHURCH SERVICES GUARDED BY POLICE

Extraordinary Measures Taken to Protect Homes and Public Buildings.

PASTORS UNAWARE OF PLAN

Policemen in Citizens' Clothes Mingle Unnoticed with the Worshippers.

Extraordinary precautions were taken by the police yesterday to guard churches, public buildings and the homes of prominent men. While Police Headquarters held to its policy of not discussing police affairs, it was understood that several hundred policemen served on guard tours throughout the day.

Unlike similar measures undertaken in other emergencies, the police guard was not "advertised." In many of the churches the "plain clothes men" mingled unnoticed with the worshippers, while the detectives pacing outside the buildings were taken merely for passers-by. Especially vigilant were the guards at St. Patrick's Cathedral, Fifth Avenue and Fiftieth Street, the scene of a bomb outrage several years ago, and so well did they mask their presence that the Rev. Father William B. Martin, assistant pastor, later said that not a single policeman had been on duty at the cathedral during the masses of the morning and the vespers at night.

St. Thomas's Church and St. Bartholomew's, the latter on Park Avenue and Fifty-first Street, also were protected, merely as a safety measure, since no threats, so far as could be ascertained, had been directed against the churches.

Strong details of men were assigned to the Federal buildings and to the courts, while a squad had the job of protecting the City Hall. No reports of suspicious incidents came to Police Headquarters during the day.

In order adequately to carry out their work the police recalled many of the men who had been on duty in Brooklyn ever since the I. R. T. strike began several weeks ago. These men, instead of being reassigned directly back to their regular precincts, were transferred for temporary duty with the "anti-bomb" squads.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—The special detail of detectives assigned to the La Salle Street financial district by Chief Garrity, following the New York bomb explosion, was still on duty tonight. The detail will be continued for some time. The Sub-Treasury and the Federal Reserve Bank are guarded by Government agents.

MONTREAL, Sept. 19.—The entire Montreal financial district is being carefully guarded as the result of the bomb explosion in New York, Colonel Gaudet, Director of Public Safety, took instant precaution as soon as he received news of the New York disaster.

TRIP SAVED MORGAN CLERK.

Joyce Killed While Filling His Place, Says James Nichols.

When James Nichols of 589 West End Avenue, head of the stock department of J. P. Morgan & Co., returned yesterday from a trip to the West Indies on the United Fruit steamship Ulua, he told reporters that he might have been killed in the explosion in place of William M. Joyce if he had not gone away.

"Joyce was sitting at my desk when he was killed," said Mr. Nichols. "He was detailed to that duty when I left New York three weeks ago. Joyce was to have been married this month, but because he considered that I needed a rest he put the wedding off until October. It was a great shock to me when I heard of his tragic death. Mr. Joyce was a most admirable young man and was esteemed by all who knew him."

WALL STREET DRAWS SUNDAY THRONGS

MANY COME FROM AFAR

Detectives Mingle with Sightseers, Hoping to Catch Unguarded Word.

Perhaps for the first time on a Sunday in its history Wall Street was jammed with people yesterday. At 9 o'clock in the morning the crowd began to gather, and by the time church services closed the throng was so dense that dozens of police reserves sent to handle the situation were forced to establish one-way traffic on the sidewalks from Broadway to William Street and to forbid the overcurious to linger near any spot which seemed to them worthy of prolonged scrutiny.

A curious feature of the tens of thousands who have journeyed to the scene of the explosion is the definitely different quality of the crowds which have been there each day since the disaster and the persistence with which interest in the scene has been maintained, which has been interpreted as indicative that the whole nation has been stirred as never before by any similar tragedy.

On Thursday, immediately after the explosion, the street was peopled by soldiers, policemen, detectives, officials and attaches of all sorts and men and women belonging immediately in the financial district, many of the men showing by their bandages that they were victims of the supposed bomb and either had remained at the scene or had returned to the vicinity of their offices as soon as they had received first aid treatment at some hospital.

Repairmen in Second Group.

Thursday night presented America's famous financial street in a new aspect, when swarms of workmen strove to repair the damage under the illumination of great arc lights, while dominating skyscrapers, ordinarily dark as the grave after nightfall, were lighted from basement to tower tip.

By Friday those in the financial district had pretty well satisfied their curiosity, particularly as word spread that much of the damage had been repaired and that no longer would one find the aspect of the hours immediately after the explosion, when so many of the onlookers were reminded of a battlefield or the stricken portion of some town that had come under some form of German frightfulness.

If those in the street and on its fringes had satiated their desire for a look, not so with the rest of business New York, which had had its curiosity just as highly whetted. All day long great crowds moved through the district, staring at pitted walls and scarred stone, peering at the impressive Morgan edifice, studying the badly marred new Assay Office and speculating about the disaster.

With its half holiday from business in many sections, Saturday brought a new mass of onlookers. Workers from the suburbs who on other days had hurried from offices to commutation trains found time for a detour through the district, and women and girls for the first time largely were in evidence.

Many From Out of Town.

The police supposed that was the end, and had made little preparation for yesterday. They were mistaken. From New Jersey, from Westchester, from Long Island and the outlying parts of New York came thousands in automobiles, which they parked on nearby

DISCOVERY BY FIREMEN

Made in Checking Up Stores Lawfully Held Within This City.

POLICE WITHHOLD DETAILS

DEAD BOY NOT WAGON DRIVER

Flynn Not Seeking Carlo Tresca —Brailovsky Detained Only as an Undesirable Alien.

Fire department officials yesterday made a discovery which they regard as of importance in connection with the combined Federal, State and city authorities' efforts to hunt down the perpetrators of last Thursday's Wall Street bomb disaster.

So sure were they that their find had a vital bearing on the quest for the wholesale murderers that they refused to allow more than a hint of its nature to become public. All that they divulged was this:

Somewhere in the check-up of all stores of explosives lawfully held in the city, which has been pressed day and night by the Bureau of Combustibles, of which Dr. William F. Doyle is the chief, and which yesterday had reached the stage of examining minor users of such material, there was discovered a marked shortage. No hint was given as to the location of the magazine from which it was missing or the sort of explosive not found where the records of receipts and stores used showed it should have been.

Officials of the department, however, were authority for the statement that they regarded their discovery as of "vital importance," adding that they had communicated every detail regarding it to the police who could use their own pleasure in amplifying the announcement.

Firemen Unusually Active.

Neither the police nor agents of the Federal Department of Justice would discuss the find. A fact which seemed to have significance was that not only the Fire Marshals and the regular attachés of the Bureau of Combustibles, but a number of other firemen who have been checking up explosives, were known to be unusually busy yesterday despite the holiday.

Whether at last the authorities were starting on a trail which would lead them somewhere or whether they once more, in a necessary process of elimination, were chasing a will o' the wisp, of course could not be determined. In police circles, however, there was comment upon the unusually small number of false clues or fruitless arrests made thus far, showing, it was thought, that the investigation was being pursued steadfastly and systematically without any undue excitement.

While this discovery remained last night the outstanding feature of another day devoted to the hunt for the criminals by the whole police department, the entire force of William J. Flynn, chief of the Justice Department's investigating agents, and others aiding in the inquiry, progress, important, if not startling, was made in other directions. The search for the owner of the horse and wagon on which the infernal contrivance is believed to have been hauled to the point in front of the new Assay Office where it was set off continued to turn to New Jersey.

It was admitted yesterday that one blacksmith had been found to identify two of the dead animal's four shoes and that he had proved a disappointment as far as being able to afford any clue to the owner or driver of the horse.

Despite this failure, the investigators still were confident that in the head and hoofs of the dead animal and the bits of ramshackle old wagon lay their greatest hope and that sooner or later the outfit must be missed from the place where it had been kept. At the same time they believed that failure through so many days to hear of any such missing horse and wagon disposed of the last lingering doubt, persistently put forward by some Socialists and others, that the affair was a willfully criminal outrage.

Identification of Boy Might Aid.

In this connection the question was considered once more whether the boy whose body still lies in the Morgue, and who is the only unidentified victim, could have been the driver. Chief Flynn admitted that it would help matters to have this body identified, but expressed strong doubt that if the driver had been on the wagon at the time of the explosion enough of him could have remained for even an attempt at identification.

Flynn was silent about the Fire Department's find and equally reticent regarding three men who late yesterday afternoon were taken by agents to his headquarters. One of these men, with a flowing black mane and a Windsor tie, looked like a Greenwich Village radical. The others were of ordinary appearance. They were closeted with Flynn a few minutes and then left in a taxicab with the agents.

Chief Flynn was asked about published reports that he was seeking five men said to be anarchists and disciples of Luigi Galliani, pupil of the notorious Italian, Malatesta, either in connection with previous bomb outrages or that now under investigation.

Most conspicuous of the men mentioned was Carlos Tresca, long known for his radical activities in New York and New Jersey. Chief Flynn denied that he sought Tresca or any of the men named and said he knew where to get all of them if he wanted them. He said suspicion had not been directed as yet toward any particular group or any particular individuals and that the authorities were keeping open minds.

Tresca Addresses Meeting Here.

Tresca returned to New York yesterday and addressed a well advertised meeting of Italians at the People's House, 7 East Fifteenth Street, on the strike on their own country. Flynn knew he was there but didn't want him.

Asked about the mention of his name in connection with the case, Tresca smilingly denied any guilty knowledge. He said he would not run away and that he could not get far as he is under bail in connection with a war-time charge in Chicago and "the authorities like me too well to let me leave."

"They can always find me at my office with the People's Defense Union on the fourth floor here at the People's House," Tresca continued, "or at my home. I am amused to see my name mentioned, but I think if they would spend more time looking for the owner or driver of the horse and wagon and would bother less about me they would make more progress."

Asked to tell his whereabouts at the time of the explosion and just before it, Tresca said he would like to consult his lawyer first. A half hour later, as he was talking with another man in his office, Tresca said:

"I have decided not to make any statement now."

"Is that on the advice of your lawyer?" was the next question.

"I wouldn't say my lawyer, just a friend," Tresca replied. "The police know I'm here and they haven't sent for me, so I see no use saying anything about where I was."

While Alexander J. Brailovsky, the Russian, who was the first person to be arrested in connection with the explosion will be arraigned in the Tombs Police Court this morning on the charge of being an undesirable alien, the police and the Federal authorities virtually admitted last night that his seizure had brought them no nearer a solution of the mystery. While his seizure in response to an anonymous letter saying he had been seen talking not far from the scene of the explosion and immediately after with three men who seemed well pleased, was regarded as a necessary part of the elimination process incident to the investigation, nothing had developed to connect him in any way with the crime.

Companions Not Found.

The three men with whom Brailovsky, said by some to be one of the chief Trotzzky-Lenin agents in America, said he was talking on harmless business, were not found yesterday and search for them was continued. It was said it was probable Brailowsky would be held until they had substantiated his story.

Questioned yesterday, the Russian again denied all connection with the affair and insisted he did not adhere to any anarchistic philosophy. Marje Weinbaum, business manager of the Russky Golos, or "Russian Voice," for which Brailovsky has been a writer for three years, said the man was more a pacifist than anything else and that he did not belong to any particular group. He said also that the magazine is nonpartisan, and it enjoyed mailing privileges all during the war when foreign publications were scrutinized carefully. He disputed the statement of members of the Police Bomb Squad that the magazine now published at 64 Seventh Street was raided at 133 East Fifteenth Street some time ago. He said the publication never was issued there, and had moved to its present quarters from 238 Sixth Street.

Mark A. Stern, manager editor of the magazine, and Azariel Kitzies, one of its editors, were examined by Department of Justice agents yesterday. They not only exonerated Brailovsky of any anarchistic associations and defended the magazine from charges that it was anything more than mildly liberal, but insisted Brailovsky was with them at noon Thursday and could not have been in Wall Street at that hour.

The arrival here this morning of Edwin P. Fischer of New York, who sent from Canada warnings of the impending disaster and who consented yesterday to return with Federal agents from Hamilton, Ont., is expected to enable the authorities to determine definitely whether his foreknowledge was merely a coincidence and his predictions the emanations from a disordered mind or whether he had in some way actually learned of a conspiracy. Chief Flynn and others do not believe he knows anything which can help them, but will question him as a matter of routine thoroughness. Flynn yesterday questioned Robert A. Pope, Fischer's brother-in-law.

Great crowds again went to Wall Street yesterday, Sunday bringing thousands from out of town. While they were inspecting the remaining traces of damage a number of the victims were buried amid scenes of great sorrow.

Ministers in many churches yesterday made the explosion the text for their sermons, calling for defiance of all terrorists and stern adherence to the doctrines of Americanism.

UNIDENTIFIED BOY NOT BOMB DRIVER

Would Have Been Blown to Bits Had He Been on Wagon, Authorities Say.

BODY STILL UNCLAIMED

Many Persons Seeking Missing Relatives Visit Morgue—Youth May Have Been Stranger in City.

Official attention again was directed yesterday toward the unidentified boy, about 20 years old, with brown hair and blue eyes, whose body still remains in the morgue, unclaimed, while every other victim of Thursday's Wall Street explosion has been identified. The investigators do not seriously believe, as has been suggested, that this body is that of the person who drove the wagon on which, it seems to have been established, the infernal contrivance was hauled to the spot where it was detonated opposite the Morgan banking house. They have recognized from the first, however, that an important part of the preliminary elimination work is to establish that the driver is a fugitive and was not himself a victim of the crime. For that reason they are hopeful that another day may bring identification of the youth.

William J. Flynn, chief of the Federal Department of Justice's Bureau of Investigation, while admitting it would be a relief to have the body identified, said yesterday he did not believe it at all probable it was that of the driver. He expressed the opinion that had the driver been on the wagon at the instant of the explosion he would have been blown into such small bits he never would have been found. It was pointed out that unless the explosion was premature, in which case it was unlikely it would have occurred in what seemed the chosen spot, the very heart of financial America, or the driver was an unsuspecting victim of the plotters, it was certain he would not have been on or near the wagon when its deadly load went off. The finding of threatening circulars in a mail box two and one-half blocks away, believed to have been placed there by the perpetrators, also seemed to preclude the idea that one of the plotters had remained behind to be killed by their own device.

Dr. Charles Norris, medical examiner for the city, yesterday made a complete record of the dead boy's injuries, which he will turn over to District Attorney Swann. Dr. Norris had the body embalmed and taken to the first floor of the Morgue in order that persons calling there in the hopes of making identification might have ready access to it.

The impression grew yesterday that the victim probably lived out of town or was a wanderer who would not be missed immediately.

Miss Mary Walsh of 92 Lott Street, Brooklyn, identified the body yesterday as that of her brother, William, but changed her mind after other relatives viewed it and said she was positive it was not that of her brother. Six other erroneous identifications were made during the day. One mother became hysterical, declaring it was that of her son. Later her husband made another inspection, and the two decided it was not their boy.

Efforts to obtain from the Volunteer Hospital, where the boy died, some data to assist in learning who he was failed. The hospital authorities reported that the body arrived at the hospital covered only with a canvas sheet and unaccompanied by clothing of any kind.

In the excitement that followed the catastrophe injured and dying were rushed to the hospitals in conveyances of every description, and no effort was made to keep records of any kind until the injured had received attention. This is thought to be the explanation for the lack of data of any kind concerning the body now at the Morgue.

THINKS GERMANS SET BLAST; HEARD THREAT

Teuton in Wall Street Uttered Warning Just After the Tragedy, Writer Says.

A suggestion that the Wall Street explosion was the work of Germans, with whom the country technically still is at war, is made in a letter to this newspaper by Robert D. North of 611 West 177th Street, who bases his surmise upon a threat he heard a Teuton make just after the explosion and near where it happened. Mr. North reported his experience to Police Headquarters.

Hundreds, if not thousands, of letters have reached the police, the Federal authorities and the offices of newspapers, and are receiving attention. Some embody intelligent, well-reasoned suggestions, some are of collateral interest, but the majority are of the "crank" type which always are called forth by any crime or tragedy which stirs the public imagination.

Particular orders have been issued by police heads that all communications, however absurd they may appear, shall receive serious consideration until it is established that they are worthless, it being recognized that some stray bit of information received in this way may be the first link in the chain of evidence against the supposed conspirators and that it well might be some seemingly queer-minded person to whom one of the guilty might have conveyed some hint of the bomb plot.

Mr. North's letter read:

"In all the discussions of the mysterious explosion near Wall and Broad Streets last Thursday I have noticed no mention of the fact that this country technically is at war with Germany. This fact suggests itself to me by reason of an experience I had on Wall Street between Broadway and Broad within five minutes after the explosion. While moving along with the crowd down Wall from Broadway I heard this from the lips of a man behind me: 'We are going to clean up this whole country.' Turning, I asked him what he meant. He replied, 'I mean what I said.'

"Not knowing at the time the serious effects of the explosion or what had caused it, I did not think much about the brief conversation at the time, but after I had viewed the heap of dead bodies piled up at the scene of the ruins I wondered if this man had not known of what was to take place and had stood off in front of Trinity Church to watch the results from a safe distance.

"On the afternoon I telephoned the Police Headquarters about the incident. I recalled that he had a decided German accent and was German in appearance, with large stomach, about 5 feet 9 inches in height and weighing 190 or 200 pounds. He wore a brownish suit of not very good quality or fit.

"As I have heard other Germans denounce this country for their Fatherland's defeat and practical ruin, I thought maybe this outrage was one in which the anarchists were not implicated.

"It was shown during the war that the Germans are masters at making weapons of death, and surely there has been no more flagrant instance of 'spurlos versengt' since 1914 than this one."

TO AID BOMB SUFFERERS.

Young Russian Violinist Will Give Benefit Performance.

It was announced yesterday by Benjamin Adler, 25 Broad Street, manager for Mischa Violin, Russian violinist, who makes his début in this country at Carnegie Hall on Sunday evening, Oct. 3, that the net proceeds of the entertainment would be devoted to the relief of the families of victims of the Wall Street bomb explosion. Mr. Adler said he would consult bankers and brokers in Wall Street today as to the best means of distributing the fund, which he said he expected would amount to about $6,000.

Mischa Violin is 21 years old and has been highly praised as a violinist in South America, where he has played for several seasons. He also played in Germany before the war. He has been in South America since 1915.

WALL STREET DRAWS SUNDAY THRONGS

streets while the sightseers made their slow way through Wall Street. With them were almost as many as on the first days who had come afoot. Scraps of conversation heard all along the way showed how many of the visitors were from out of town—no inconsiderable number being tourists from distant parts, unwilling to go home without carrying to "the folks" a first-hand description of how it all looked.

A great many of those whose presence necessitated emergency traffic regulations came from the churches, particularly from Trinity, on Broadway. Hundreds of Trinity worshippers passed through the block as soon as the services were ended. Many others came in sight-seeing buses.

As on the other days, all the buildings were well guarded and detectives mingled with the throng, patiently making their way back and forth with one group after another, hoping against hope that some conspirators might have been tempted back to the place and might whisper one unguarded syllable for them to overhear.

Opposite the Morgan Building and the Assay Office the sidewalks were kept clear, because of an accident on Saturday night while workmen were replacing windows in the Morgan offices. Two heavy plate-glass sheets toppled out of the frames but a few moments after being put in place. No one was injured, but as a precaution Inspector Coleman decided to keep clear all spaces in front of buildings where repairs were being made.

MANNING ASKS STERN JUSTICE FOR BOMBERS

Trinity's Rector Says the 'Intellectuals" Should Also Be Dealt With.

POLICE AT CHURCH DOOR

Special Protection Provided Because of Nearness to Scene of Explosion.

Stern and unhesitating justice must be meted out to those who perpetuated the bomb crime of last Thursday in Wall Street, the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning declared from the pulpit of Old Trinity yesterday morning.

Dr. Manning arrived Saturday morning from Seal Harbor, Maine, where he and his family have their Summer home. He went to the Broad Street and Volunteer Hospitals, visiting every patient in each who was injured in the explosion. The rector was temperate in what he said in his sermon, remarking afterward to reporters that it was a time for action more than words.

Police were stationed outside the big iron gates of Trinity and looked over all who went in. But nothing out of the ordinary happened. Special protection had been sent to Trinity because it is only a block and a half from the scene of the explosion. Dr. Manning's text was "Let brotherly love continue."

"We are thinking a great deal just now about the claims of citizenship and the qualities that are essential to our life as a people," said Dr. Manning. "Our ideal as a nation is first of all justice, righteousness, fair dealing for all, equal opportunity for all. We do not say that this is fully realized. It is exceedingly difficult to realize such ideals in the complicated affairs of men. With literal truth we all say this: Every man, woman and child in this land has a fuller and freer opportunity than he has in any other land in this world.

Call for Stern Justice.

"Second, our ideal as a nation is liberty—liberty based on and protected by law. We make the laws ourselves. If there is anything in them that is not right, we have it in our power to convince a majority of the people and change the law. Law in this land is for the protection of your liberty and my liberty.

"Third, Our ideal as a nation includes the principle of brotherhood and good will toward all. We think of the American people as a great family. No one in this land is trying to oppress anyone else or to hold anyone else down. Any man or woman in America can attain to any position he can fit himself for and win by his own honest efforts.

"It seems almost unbelievable that in a land with these ideals there should be people among us setting themselves openly or secretly to overthrow or destroy our country and all its institutions. But we know that is a fact, and we have had evidence of it this last week that has taken the lives of between thirty and forty innocent, law-abiding individuals and has injured some two hundred others. This was a deed of cold-blooded and cruel murder.

"There must be stern and unhesitating justice.

"There is another class that must be dealt with—'the intellectuals,' who say they do not act with force, but who propagate ideas that incite such."

Dr. Manning said these people were inclined to look upon such a course as a "passing and pleasant sensation."

"It is a time for a tide of right public sentiment on outraged feelings and righteous indignation," continued Dr. Manning. "Make them hide their heads in guilt and shame. We must be far more insistant.

Duty of the Church.

"We need more, all of us, to feel far more deeply our responsibility for making all of our people realize the principles, the ideals, for which our country in truth stands. We bring vast numbers of foreigners to our shores each year. What corresponding effort do we make to help these people to become a part of our great American commonwealth? We ought to take that vastly more seriously.

"We will have to stand more clearly ourselves for the ideals of America. There must be honesty and integrity in all the aspects of life. The merchant who has anything crooked in his business transactions cannot inspire this.

"There must be more reverence for law, the holding of law as a sacred thing when once it is made. There are people, and some of them respectable members of this community, that because they do not like the prohibition law think they are at liberty to evade it. Any one who takes that position in a community is aligning himself with the forces of destruction.

"There should be felt more widely the great principle of brotherhood. Anarchy cannot exist in such an atmosphere as that. It only grows up like a cancer in our lives.

"The church is the great institution above all others that is to keep us out of this. We must all of us make of ourselves missionaries in all our relationships—business, social and all others. The church must give its strength to teaching and preaching brotherly love."

Dr. Stires Asks for Action.

Parishioners of St. Thomas's Episcopal Church, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third Street, were requested by the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, the rector, to pray for all those who were implicated in the explosion of last Thursday in Wall Street.

Dr. Stires did not mention the tragedy in his sermon, but in making his announcements for the week the rector asked for prayers along four particular lines this week. First, That the prayers of the congregation should be lifted for all those in affliction because of the wholesale murder. Second, That the prayers of the parishioners should be raised on behalf of those who perpetrated the crime, that they should be brought to a better mind and come to see their evil deeds. Third, That intercession be made for the United States Government, that it should do its duty. Fourth, That petitions should be offered by each individual for himself or herself that all might do their duty as Americans.

Dr. Stires said that there was a great deal of sentimental sympathy abroad. This was the kind that did a great deal of weeping and mourning, but accomplished nothing.

"Most of us are of that kind," said Dr. Stires. "When something happens we say 'Something ought to be done about it,' and yet we do nothing." He expressed the hope that those before him might "have the grace to go beyond that and put their thoughts into action."

Charles Steele of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. is senior warden of St. Thomas's. But he was not present yesterday, his family not having returned from their Summer home.

Mgr. Evers Denounces Bombers.

Mgr. Luke J. Evers, Chaplain of the Tombs and rector of St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Church, Duane Street and City Hall Place, in his sermon at the 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning mass for newspaper workers, said:

"This explosion will give you an idea of what the world is coming to. With rascals of the type who would kill innocent persons and who are responsible for that infernal outrage, roaming about at will, with no morals, no laws, no government, no religion and no God, it behooves Americans to be firm and keep calm.

"The type of man who would blow to eternity innocent hard-working people going about their business has no moral responsibility. This type of man is like a ship on the ocean without a rudder and without a compass, for the reason they have no God. Thursday's explosion should be a forceful reminder that we know not the hour, and that people in this time particularly should prepare themselves to meet their Maker.

"It is terrible to think that all those people, young and old, innocent of any intention to do anybody evil, left their homes that morning without the slightest doubt that they would return to them in the same cheerful frame of mind that night. And then to think that some person or persons, of a disordered mind, with no thought of God, laid that machine so that many of them were killed and injured, can only bring back to us, more forcibly than ever, the condition of affairs in this world today."

LEE SAYS EXPLOSION WAS AN ACCIDENT

Socialist Asserts His Belief That Bomb Story Is a Capitalistic Invention.

Algernon Lee, sometimes a spokesman for the New York State Socialist Party on public questions, declared yesterday he was convinced the Wall Street explosion was an accident. He made this statement in an address at the New Star Casino at a mass meeting in honor of the five ousted and re-elected Socialist Assemblymen.

"We have seen enough of the systematic, diabolical and deliberate efforts on the part of capitalistic agencies to create the impression that so-called radicals are seeking to effect a revolution by the use of explosives. We know something of Mr. Palmer's efforts in this regard—his May Day plots and other alleged bomb outrages.

"I am convinced that the explosion came as the result of a collision between a truck loaded with high explosives and some other vehicle—in other words, that the stories that appeared in the first editions of the afternoon papers on that day were true. A few hours later, however, after the forces which we Socialists know so well had been put to work, a different version appeared.

"Every man in the building trades knows that the ordinances regarding explosives are being violated every day by business men. If the blame for the explosion should be placed against the du Pont Company, or some other explosives company, there would be big damage suits from the families of the dead and injured and those who suffered property losses. A few million dollars constitutes a powerful motive for blaming the explosion upon so-called Reds.

"They have overdone the bomb business for several years now. The people are not so easily fooled.

"I find a double significance in the charge, before there is any evidence, that Reds caused the explosion which resulted in the death and maiming of so many.

"I find first that there may very well have been an attempt to cover up the recklessness with which business is carried on—there are hundreds of cases where lives have been sacrificed because business was carried on unlawfully; and, second, it would appear that there is an attempt to capitalize the explosion, to turn it into political ammunition, at a time when we Socialists are making a peaceful effort to bring about a peaceful solution of our economic problems. It is true that our enemies have mighty little intellect, but they have plenty of money and they have an organization which can work wonders."

Mr. Lee, who is an instructor in the Rand School, was asked at the close of the meeting how he reconciled his belief that the explosion was an accident with the warning letters and the slugs found on the scene.

"The slugs are parts of window weights. These can be obtained in any junk shop. Perhaps there was a box of cast iron junk in the wagon. The warnings might easily be 'planted.' Anyway, I refuse to believe that the explosion was anything but an accident until I have seen definite proof that it was a plot," he replied.

"Given that radicals would conceive such a crime, do you suppose they would choose an hour when most of the people falling within the danger zone would be persons of their own class? Or, if they were seeking the life of J. P. Morgan, would they select a time when the banker was in Europe?"

QUITS CANADA WILLINGLY

he might be entirely lucid on certain matters and be a competent witness.

Robert A. Pope, brother-in-law of Fischer, said yesterday at his home in Forest Hills that the authorities had informed him that they had no suspicion that Fischer was connected with the bomb conspiracy, but wished to question him as a matter of form as to the source of the information upon which he based his warnings. Mr. Pope and George T. O'Neill of Nutley, N. J., to whom Fischer gave warning on a train, had previously been questioned by William J. Flynn at the offices of the Department of Justice. Mr. Pope reiterated that no one who knew Fischer would even suspect him of any connection with the explosion.

Asked about his theory that Fischer received information of the explosion through some form of telepathy, Mr. Pope said that this was a matter for experts. "Some of them believe that such a thing is possible and others deny it," he said. "I am not an authority. The only point I make is that there are many things about psychic phenomena which we do not understand and there is a possibility that he may have received warning of the explosion through telepathy."

Fischer's prophecy of the explosion was the subject of interested speculation yesterday among players on the courts of the West Side Tennis Club at Amsterdam Avenue and West Ninety-third Street, where he was accustomed to play regularly. There was a general disbelief that Fischer's apparent information could be accounted for by telepathy, but that he must have become acquainted with the plot in some way which has not yet been explained. None of the players there had received warning cards from Fischer, although most of them know him well and had played with him frequently.

Thomas Delehanty, caretaker of the courts, to whom Fischer conveyed a warning in person, scouted the telepathic theory. "He didn't get the information 'out of the air,'" he said. "He was very definite about it and came here early one morning especially to warn me. I didn't pay any attention to it then, because I knew his condition, but, as I look back on it now, I can see how earnest he was about it."

Denies Close Friendship.

Mrs. Jokichi Takamine, Jr., whose card was found in Fischer's possession when he was detained at Hamilton, Ont., denied yesterday at her home in Clifton, N. J., that either she or her husband, a prominent Japanese chemist, were intimately acquainted with him. Mrs. Takamine said she had met Fischer casually two years ago at Merrie Wold Park, a summer resort in Sullivan County, and had an indistinct recollection of having given him one of her visiting cards.

"That's ridiculous," she said, when told that Fischer had said that she was the wife of one of the most prominent explosives manufacturers in the United States and would come to his assistance. "He was just a chance acquaintance of ours at the summer resort. We were up there again this year, and he was there also. I only remember to have spoken to him once or twice.

"He never visited at our home and, so far as I know, my husband never had any conversation with him, except the few times at the summer resort. He never visited the Takamine laboratories and he is mistaken in saying that munitions are manufactured there. The laboratories are devoted entirely to the manufacture of drugs."

Mr. Takamine was not at home and Mrs. Takamine, who is an American, did not say where he could be reached. Mr. Takamine's father, Dr. Jokichi Takamine, Sr., is one of the most famous chemists in the world, and has a laboratory at 120 Broadway and a home at 334 Riverside Drive. Dr. Takamine was said to be out of the city.

STILL SUSPECTS FISCHER.

Canadian Officer Says Interned Prisoner Had Same Eccentricities.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Ontario, Sept. 19.—Lieutenant Sproule of Toronto, who believes that the pictures of Edwin P. Fischer show that he is the Paul Fischer who was held prisoner at the alien enemy internment camp at Amherst, Nova Scotia, declared today that the eccentricities of Fischer, as related to him by the local police, were quite in keeping with the Fischer he had known in the camp where he was second in command for a year. When he left the camp Fischer was still there, he said. He heard later that Fischer had been paroled and had left for the United States.

"Fischer particularly impressed me," said Lieutenant Sproule. "He caused more trouble than all the rest of the men put together. The Fischer of the internment camp was a good pianist and led an orchestra of forty pieces formed by the prisoners. There was also a male choir of 100 voices there. Fischer took a special delight in starting concerts at late hours of the night. The records show that he was a New York man and was captured as an alien enemy in the first days of the war, though not on Canadian soil.

"He was one of a party of several hundred men who left the United States and tried to get to Germany by way of Mexico. They took the German liner Montserrat, which later called at New York, picking up more passengers. After she had left New York and was off Bermuda she was picked up by the Canadian cruiser Niobe and taken to Halifax, where she was detained. The prisoners were confined in the citadel there until the arrival of the converted cruiser Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which was later sunk by the British warship Highflyer.

"It was then decided to open the internment camp at Amherst, and later all prisoners at the citadel, some 900, were taken there. Fischer, who was a good linguist, was among them.

"The prisoners," said Lieutenant Sproule, "worked around at the Scotia Experimental Farm and different farms in the locality and had communication with one another, and were under few repressive restrictions so long as they did not try to escape."

Lieutenant Sproule did not know whether Fischer was concerned in the upbuilding of a library of Bolshevist literature which was found in the camp following a search.

Miss Ethel Fischer, sister of Edwin P. Fischer, and Robert A. Pope, brother-in-law, have denied that Fischer was ever held prisoner in an internment camp.

NO WORLDWIDE PERIL, SAYS LONDON EDITOR

Daily News Sees No Cause for Fear of a General Bomb Plot.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 20.—The Daily News' editorial on the Wall Street explosion says: "The American people, who are living on top of the high wave of anti-Bolshevism, will no doubt be strongly tempted to ascribe the outrage to a Boleshevist origin, and it is to be feared in the heat of public indignation a good many innocent persons will be in more peril than the guilty ones.

"There is no reason for worldwide alarm, even if this is proved to be one of the elements of a worldwide plot. Revolution through the agency of anarchist bombs is the mad hope of a comparative handful of deluded persons who may be able to kill a few hundred innocent persons, but whose own destruction would be in the end inevitable."

"A Tower of Strength"

"I hope it will be a long time before the Bankers Trust Company, or anyone else has the opportunity to act under my will, but if I were to die tomorrow I would feel that the settlement of my estate would have thoroughly competent and conscientious care at the hands of your Institution".

THE writer of this letter to the Bankers Trust Company, who is a director of a large business concern, has put his house in order and, as a result, enjoys living in it. The making of wills and appointing of executors is to him no longer a matter of worry, but an accomplished fact.

He has made his will, appointed the Bankers Trust Company as his executor and trustee and he knows that the interests of his heirs will be protected by a strong, permanent organization skilled in the administration of estates.

In other words he has applied to his personal affairs those principles of order and foresight which made a success of his business life, and thus he has made certain that those he leaves behind will derive the utmost benefit and security from his estate.

Let us send you our pamphlet "Why a Trust Company?" which explains briefly the definite advantages of our trust services, and "The First Step in Making Your Will", which explains how you may start today.

HOLD FUNERAL RITES FOR 6 BOMB VICTIMS

Crowds on City Streets Pay Moment's Tribute as Cortèges Pass.

FOUR WERE WAR VETERANS

More Than 1,000 Attend Services for William F. Hutchinson and Harold L. Gillies.

Persons pleasure bent in widely separated parts of the city yesterday paused a moment in silent tribute as a funeral cortege passed. There were five such processions which seemed to be singled out for public mourning; two were in Manhattan and three in Brooklyn. As each wound its way to a cemetery the whispered words, "an explosion victim," were passed from immediate mourners to groups in which were many who had seen reflected the lethal flash and heard the accompanying roar which brought untimely death to thirty-four and maimed so many others.

The explosion victims for whom funeral rites were performed yesterday were William Furman Hutchinson, of Garden City, L. I.; Harold Lusk Gillies, of Pelham Manor; Mrs. Margaret Drury, of Ridgewood, Queens; William Joyce, an employe of J. P. Morgan & Co.; William W. White, of 4 Parkside Court, Brooklyn, and Charles Lindroth, an employe of the National City Bank.

More than 1,000 attended the two funeral services for William Furman Hutchinson and Harold Lusk Gillies at the Funeral Church, Broadway and Sixty-sixth Street. Mr. Hutchinson was 43 years old, an insurance broker. Mr. Gillies was employed by George H. Burr & Co., 120 Broadway. Mr. Hutchinson's was a military funeral, as he was a veteran of the Spanish-American War and of the World War. The services were read by the Rev. J. P. McComas, Vicar of St. Paul's Chapel, Chaplain of the Seventh Regiment. Many of the Seventh officers attended the funeral. Burial was in Greenwood Cemetery, Hempstead, L. I., where taps were sounded and the customary volleys fired. The Rev. Dr. Hunt of Garden City officiated at the burial service.

Several hours later the services for Mr. Gillies were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Sartell Prentice, Minister of the Dutch Reformed Church at Nyack, N. Y. The body was cremated. Mr. Gillies was head of the New York Alumni Chapter of the Psi Upsilon fraternity, which he joined at Amherst College. A large delegation from the fraternity attended the funeral. Hutchinson and Gillies were close friends, and were chatting together at Broad and Wall Streets when they were killed.

The services for Mr. Joyce were held at St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, by the Rev. Dr. J. Clarence Jones. Representatives of the Morgan firm, a delegation from the Apollo Club and former members of the Fourteenth Service Company, Signal Corps, with which Mr. Joyce served overseas, attended the funeral.

Services for William W. White, who died in Volunteer Hospital on Friday, were held last night at his late home, 4 Parkside Court, Brooklyn. He was in the stationery and printing business at 31 Cliff Street. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery today.

The body of Charles Lindroth of 516 East Fifth Street, Brooklyn, was buried yesterday in the Flatbush Hills Cemetery. Funeral services for the veteran machine gunner, who became an employe of the National City Bank at the close of the war, were held on Saturday night at his late home. Lindroth was gassed and was invalided home because of wounds during the war.

The services for Mrs. Margaret Drury were conducted at her late home, 132 Ridgewood Avenue, Queens, by the Rev. John Hines, a Lutheran minister. Only relatives and close friends attended. Interment was in Mount Olivet Cemetery. Mrs. Drury was 38 years old, a stenographer in the employ of the Curtis-Alley Company, a Broad Street firm.

A requiem mass for John A. Donahue, another Morgan employe killed last Thursday, will be solemnized this morning at the Church of St. Rose of Lima, Brooklyn. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Reginald J. Ellsworthy of 64 Liberty Street, West Orange, N. J., is to be buried in Rosedale Cemetery this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The body will be accompanied to the grave by a guard of honor from B Company, 114th Infantry, 29th Division, with which Ellsworthy served overseas. He died in Broad Street Hospital last Thursday soon after the explosion.

The funeral of T. Montgomery Osprey of 136 Chestnut Street, Flatbush, whose body was so badly mutilated that identification was not possible until Friday, will be held privately today. Mr. Osprey was a son of Thomas Stewart Osprey, for thirty years a member of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Jean Brander Osprey, Recording Secretary of the New York Chapter, War Mothers. He served with the 27th Division overseas and was wounded and invalided home.

Tulsa Is Pennant Winner.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 19.—By splitting even in a double header with Sioux City, Iowa, today, Tulsa, Okla., won the 1920 Western League pennant. Had Tulsa lost both games, Wichita, Kan., would have been the winner, as the latter club took both ends of a double header from Omaha.

MILLERAND'S ELECTION NOW SEEMS CERTAIN

More Power for President Promised—"On to Versailles!" Demonstration Planned.

PARIS, Sept. 19.—The election of Premier Millerand to the Presidency of France today seems inevitable, despite the Premier's repeated declarations that he is not a candidate for the office.

The Premier has received assurances from numerous groups in the Chamber of deputies and the Senate that, if a revision of the French Constitution is necessary to give to the President a wider range of authority in public affairs, this will be made. Former President Poincaré and former Premier Briand in their writings have asserted that this authority should be accorded the President.

A great demonstration is being arranged for Tuesday, when M. Millerand reads the letter of resignation of President Deschanel to the Chamber of Deputies.

"On to Versailles!" is expected to be the almost unanimous shout of the Chamber of Deputies, except for the Socialists, in favor of Millerand, and it is believed in political circles that Millerand will be unable to avoid accepting the nomination.

Concerning a successor to M. Millerand in the Premiership, should he take the Presidency, the newspapers believe important changes would occur in the present Cabinet. Most of the journals think former President Poincaré would take the Ministry of Finance, while the Echo de Paris sees a possibility of Jules Steeg, Minister of the Interior, becoming President of the Council, with Charles C. A. Jonnart, Ambassador Extraordinary to the Vatican, as Foreign Minister.

Great improvement in the condition of President Deschanel has been observed since he has definitely tendered his resignation. Instead of being nervous and feverish, seeking relief in long walks and refusing to talk to his family he is calm and takes pleasure in conversing with those about him. He worked without fatigue for a long time in his study yesterday.

FRENCH-HUNGARIAN ACCORD

New Foreign Minister and Military Mission to Further Alliance.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 18.—I learn from an excellent source that the appointment of Count Emerich Csaky as Hungarian Foreign Secretary is most probable. Csaky is one of the most zealous supporters of the alliance between Hungary and France.

General Balthasar Lang, chief of the military Cabinet of Admiral Horthy, will arrive in Paris with several Hungarian staff officers, it is said, for the purpose of the complete equipment of the Hungarian Army with the aid of the French Government, but the task of the delegation in all probability will be of greater political than military importance.

Dr. Dvorzak will leave for Paris. Dvorzak is the leader of the Slovaklan Party which seeks separation from Bohemia and reunion with Hungary.

These facts indicate the character of the new political policy of Hungary and the attitude of France.

which were conferred by the Haitian Government on the French interests in the Banco Nacional who sold their stock to the National City Bank.

Some years ago the Haitian Government issued bonds on which it obligated itself to pay interest. Failure of the Haitian Government to meet its foreign interest obligations resulted in the negotiation of an agreement, through the influence of the American Government, under which a financial adviser was appointed on recommendation of the State Department for the Haitian Government. Colonel McIlhenny is now and has been for some time acting in the capacity of financial adviser. Colonel McIlhenny has been opposed to the Haitian Government's paying the National City Bank for deposits such as was done by the Haitian Government to the Banco Nacional when it was under the control of the French interests.

Admiral Knapp is putting himself into touch with officials of the Haitian Government, the American Minister, the American financial adviser and others involved in the situation and his instructions are to endeavor to bring about a just and mutually satisfactory settlement, if possible.

There are three forms of government in Haiti. There is a native government, headed by a President and Congress. There is the government of the financial advisers. There is also the military force under the command of American officers. The marines were sent there after the outbreak of the World War, when Germany was looking toward Haiti, and banditry was creating general unrest in the islands. The stated purpose of the American marines was to maintain order. This, they are believed by high naval and marine officials, to have done.

The American Government has a Minister in Haiti in the person of Arthur Bailly-Blanchard. Admiral Knapp, it is understood, on his present mission has powers superior to those possessed by the Minister. He will not only go into the pressing financial problems, but also into other aspects of the situation, including matters of government and use of the marine forces.

President Wilson and Secretary Colby have been considering the Haitian problem for some time. Admiral Knapp was sent to the Black Republic on a quasi-secret mission, and but for the attacks recently made by Republican leaders and others on American activities in Haiti, it is doubtful if the facts regarding the dispatch of Knapp to the island would have become generally known for some time.

GIOLITTI FAVORS SYNDICAL CONTROL

Wants Workers to Have Co-responsibility in Functioning of Nation's Industry.

MILAN, Sept. 18.—The immediate result of the Turin conference is Premier Giolitti's decree for the nomination of a mixed technical commission with equal representation of all parties interested, which shall proceed to draw up proposals for a solution of the national industrial crisis on the principle of syndical control.

Having listened patiently to the arguments on both sides for three hours, the Prime Minister reminded the conference that the principle had been voted on favorably by the Deputies as far back as Dec. 13 last, six months before his return to power.

"I think the historic moments through which we are passing," he said, "can be interpreted in one way only, and that is that a radical revision of the relations hitherto existing between capital and labor is inevitable. It is no longer possible to uphold the criterion that in a great industry there must be only one head in command, while thousands of dependents must obey without possessing the guarantee of control over the activities of the head himself.

"I am convinced it is necessary to make it possible for the workers to contribute toward the functioning of a firm to the extent of giving them a true sense of co-responsibility. Once this idea is actuated by raising the function of the workmen they will be placed in conditions which will enable them to learn and to advance and to better their positions."

Catholics Oppose Session.

There will probably be no session of the Chamber of Deputies until the commission is ready to present definite proposals, because the Catholic Popular Party, which after the Socialist, is the strongest group in the House, is opposed to the extraordinary summons for what may prove to be a mere academic debate. But although the Catholics are highly sensitive as to the prestige of their own "white" syndicates and to the likely reaction, which a specifically Socialist victory might stir among the masses, they are as a party in open and substantial agreement with the Socialist thesis as embodied in the majority resolution passed at Milan by the General Confederation of Labor.

Both parties are absolutely agreed that staff control ought to cover the whole financial as well as technical field of industry, especially for establishing processes that determine cost prices and capital and all successive developments. Neither Reds nor Whites want to exclude the State altogether from participation in the system of control, but the keen spirit of rivalry between their respective organizations may cause a split over the important question as to what precise organization is best fitted to exercise control.

This right is claimed by the General Confederation of Labor as representing the vast bulk of the organized Italian workmen on the ground that if mere autonomous control of production were granted to each single workshop it would in the long run tend to enthrone the selfishness of particular groups of toilers as a substitute for the egoism of employers.

ROME, Sept. 19.—On invitation of Premier Giolitti, the employers and metal workers have sent representatives to Rome to continue the negotiations on the points not yet agreed upon looking to a settlement of the strike. An accord already has been reached on the following points in dispute:

First—There is to be an increase in wages of four lire daily, except that workmen from 18 to 20 years of age and women above 22 years of age receive 80 per cent. of the increase, while women below 20 years of age and boys of from 15 to 18 years will receive 60 per cent. thereof.

Second—A week's vacation yearly with full pay for all workmen who have served at least twelve months.

Third—After three years' service men dismissed shall be entitled to two days' full pay for each year of service, unless they shall have been dismissed as punishment or have left voluntarily.

Fourth—Seventy-five per cent. of the increase contemplated in the first paragraph is to be considered an allowance for the high cost of living, and power is to be given to decrease it proportionately in case there is a diminution in the cost of living.

The points on which an accord has not yet been reached are:

First—Claims by the workmen that they shall be paid for the period of the strike and of the occupation of the works.

Second—Refusal by the masters to re-employ those persons guilty of violence against the masters or of having damaged their property.

Third—The date from which the increase in wages contemplated is to be calculated.

The impression prevails that a complete accord will be reached shortly.

Premier Giolitti today expressed the hope of being able to reopen the Chamber of Deputies during the first fortnight of November, instead of at the end of that month, as has been customary.

Several Socialist Deputies today visited the Premier and insisted on an immediate reopening of Parliament in order to bring up a discussion of their bill on the new status of workmen and the relations of the men and masters inside manufactories.

The Premier replied that discussion of these subjects would take place on a bill which the Government would present to Parliament after it has received a report from the commission of employers and workmen who are now negotiating.

High Commissioner Quoted as Authority for New Proposals to the Allies.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 19.—M. Caniopulos, Greek High Commissioner at Constantinople, declares that Premier Venizelos has demanded that the Allies turn over the occupation of Constantinople to the Greek army, put the Pontus under Greek administration and permit the Greeks to continue their operations in Anatolia.

The Allies as yet have not replied to these demands, but in British circles it is believed the reply surely will be unfavorable.

The British have withdrawn half their troops from Ismid, sending the troops to India and Mesopotamia and replacing them with Tommies, owing to propaganda being circulated against Indians fighting the Mussulmans.

It is incredible that the people of England will allow this callous, cold-blooded murder to be pushed to the end. I think that God is giving them their last chance to pause and consider. But if their determination is to go on, our resolution was prepared from the beginning, and we are prepared to die."

Says Kenny is an American.

CORK, Sept. 19.—The hunger strikers in Cork jail were reported today to be in an exceptionally weakened condition, due to a bad night experienced by all, especially Burke and Power, who have been suffering from insomnia for nearly a week.

A Cork hospital nurse who was permitted to see the prisoners last evening said that Hennessy was unconscious—scarcely more than living. The condition of Kennedy and Donovan was grave. This was the forty-first day of their hunger strike.

The Reverend T. Carroll of Greenagh called at the Cork jail this evening and notified the governor of the jail that Joseph Kenny, one of the hunger strikers, is an American citizen. He said that Kenny, who was arrested on suspicion of being an Irish Republican soldier, had lived for many years in Montana, and that he was the father of seven children.

Father Carroll, who is a fellow-townsman of Kenny, said he had communicated with the American authorities, and had received documents establishing Kenny's American citizenship. Kenny was married in Montana and returned to Ireland owing to impaired health, according to the statement of the priest.

Harold Barry, former high sheriff of Cork, today telegraphed the Archbishop of Canterbury, asking the Archbishop to intervene with the Premier on behalf of the hunger strikers on the ground that they now had fasted "the forty days and forty night."

Previous dispatches have described Kenny as a man 42 years of age. A dispatch of Sept. 14 said he was the father of seven children. It added that Kenny's wife was ill which was causing him much anxiety and lowering his morale. His condition then was described as extremely critical.

Greenwood Rejects Magistrates' Plea.

BELFAST, Sept. 19.—Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland, has informed the Magistrates of County Louth that he can hold out no hope that the British Government will reverse its decision in the case of Lord Mayor MacSwiney of Cork, on hunger strike in Brixton Jail.

The Magistrates recently sent a communication to Sir Hamar demanding full self-government for Ireland, with powers not less comprehensive than those enjoyed by any dominion, and calling for the immediate release of MacSwiney. The Chief Secretary's reply to the Magistrates says:

"I can hold out no hope of reversal of the decision of the Government in the case of the Lord Mayor of Cork. I can assure you the Government is desirous of granting the fullest possible measure of self-government to the Irish people, and would welcome an expression of moderate opinions directed to the unfortunate state of affairs."

REASONABLY PRICED FINE FURNITURE

The Sloane Collection

Several old New York Establishments have a national reputation for excellence of goods and service.

The prestige of their names is so great and their homes so imposing that many persons of artistic tastes but moderate means hesitate to visit them, feeling that the high quality must express itself in high prices.

On the contrary, articles in these great houses, quality for quality, cost less than elsewhere, and in order to spread such knowledge, visitors are as welcome as purchasers.

In the field of Furniture there is a conspicuous case of this rare association of high quality and reasonable price.

Sloane's devote fully as much attention to their Collection of Reasonably Priced Fine Furniture as to their special hand made pieces. This Collection is growing in size and usefulness all the time, because merit, price and the guarantee of an honored name, make shopping there a delightful experience.

PEACE PARLEY TOMORROW

Will Be Held in Club That Was Headquarters of Black-Headed Knights in 14th Century.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

RIGA, Sept. 18.—Though the opening of the new Polish-Russian peace conference still hangs fire, there was an interesting preliminary today when the heads of the respective delegations, Dombski and Joffe, met informally and had a heart-to-heart talk lasting two hours.

The place of the new negotiations is one of the oldest and most remarkable buildings in this part of Europe, called the Schwarzhaupterhaus. It was built in the early fourteenth century as the headquarters of an order known as the Black-Headed Knights, who adopted this strange title in honor of their patron, Saint Mauritius, a Moor. It later became a sort of bachelors' club composed of leading merchants of the city and was the scene of combined business and pleasure right through the centuries until the World War.

When Riga was threatened by the Germans the treasures of gold and silver plate accumulated by the Order were sent for safekeeping to Petrograd. The building still contains, however, several fine pictures, including portraits of Peter the Great, Alexander II. and Catherine. These hang on the walls of the conference chamber. They are more than life size and in fact dominate the whole room, where will sit this week the Bolshevist successors of the empire they once ruled. From the obvious irony of this fact there originated a rumor, now contradicted, that the Soviet representatives demanded the removal of the pictures during the conference.

Taking advantage of the temporary presence here of an army of foreign correspondents, the Latvian Foreign Minister today gave a press reception, and in a brief speech, clearly intended for a wider public, foreshadowed the formation of a union of newly-created Baltic States, giving as the ground: "We are threatened by two powerful enemies, Russia and Germany, and therefore must always be ready for a struggle."

Fighting Expected to Continue.

RIGA, Sept. 18 (Associated Press).—After a two-hour conference this afternoon between M. Dombski, head of the Polish Peace Mission, and Adolph Joffe, Chief of the Russian Soviet delegation, the opinion was expressed to The Associated Press by M. Lades, Secretary of the Polish Mission, that there was little chance of a cessation of the Russo-Polish fighting until preliminary peace terms were agreed upon.

Action at the conference which will endeavor to reach an agreement on armistice terms and formulate a treaty of peace between Poland and Soviet Russia will be controlled largely by the military situation, according to views expressed here.

The favorable military situation of the Poles at present, which makes their position more secure, and the delay in the arrival of the Polish delegates here, coupled with the deliberateness of the preliminary procedure, have created the impression that the conference may be long drawn out. Until the Poles are able to establish a line which can readily be defended, it is considered probable in some official quarters here that Poland will not agree to a cessation of hostilities.

M. Meirmwitch, Lettish Minister of Foreign Affairs, will open the peace conference Tuesday with an address of welcome, to which MM. Dombski and Joffe will respond. The presiding officer will be M. Dombski, it being his turn to preside under the terms of the agreement reached at Minsk.

This afternoon's conference was held behind closed doors. M. Joffe drove to it in a limousine which belonged to the former Emperor of Russia, while M. Dombski arrived in a dilapidated one-horse vehicle.

WARSAW, Sept. 18.—The official communication issued by the War Office today says:

"Our detachments have driven the enemy across the Stripa and have broken his resistance. They are approaching Sereth after the capture of Zloczow, Biala, Kamien and Olesko and the occupation of the Styr and Stockhod Rivers. Our pursuit of the enemy's forces is being continued.

"In the region of Kobrin the enemy attacked fiercely, but vainly.

"It has been observed that the Lithuanians are reinforcing their troops, which proves that their declarations of peaceful designs are lacking in sincerity."

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 19.—A special dispatch to the National Tidende from Christiania says Litvinoff has handed to the Government a quite unacceptable proposal for a commercial treaty.

It is reported that the Government has presented a counter proposal for trade, but allowing the Bolsheviki certain diplomatic rights. Thus in return for a limited trade relation Norway will allow a certain quantity of courier mail and code telegrams to be received and dispatched, but an absolute guarantee is demanded against Bolshevist propaganda, and free transit through Norway is definitely refused.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 19.—A special dispatch to the Berlingske Tidende from Kovno says a prominent Lithuanian statesman, Rarusvicius, who carried on the peace negotiations with Soviet Russia, expresses the view that the peace obtained has enormously improved the economical prospects of Lithuania, which got important forest concessions along the frontier calculated to yield some millions of pounds' worth of timber yearly, besides which a large share of Russian transit trade is to go via Lithuania.

This will necessitate an extension of the Lithuanian railways and a large increase of rolling stock. The Government, it is said, intends to order 500 locomotives and 12,000 cars in America.

HARD FIGHTING AT AINTAB.

All Americans There Are Well, Letter from Relief Worker Says.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 18 (Associated Press).—French and Turkish forces are engaged in an almost continuous artillery duel at Aintab, where the French are being besieged, and occasionally infantry forces take part in the fighting, says a letter received here from Boyd Wesson, an American relief worker, who is in the city. The letter was sent out of Aintab by a member of a camel train which made its way through the Turkish lines to the coast.

Decisive results have not as yet been reported, but in the fighting thus far, the French seem to have been more successful than their opponents, Mr. Boyd says. His letter states all the Americans in the city are well.

SAYS THE LEAGUE IS PREVENTING WAR

Swedish Premier Declares It Has Proved Its Effectiveness in Aland Islands Intervention.

NEED US TO STRENGTHEN IT

Danger Would Then Be Reduced to a Minimum, He Asserts—Finnish Minister Objects.

PARIS, Sept. 19 (Associated Press).—The League of Nations, through its intervention in the Aland Islands question between Sweden and Finland, has proved its right to live as an effective means of preventing future wars growing out of international disputes, said Hjalmar Branting, Prime Minister of Sweden, today.

"I will not use the word 'war,' but the situation between Sweden and Finland was tense," Premier Branting declared. "The Council of the League, through its cautious but prompt action, has dissipated the feeling and Sweden believes the Council will settle the matter to the satisfaction of both countries.

"Sweden has complete confidence in the League as a means of preventing future wars, and proof of this lies in the fact that we unhesitatingly placed our case in its hands. I believe the action of the League has taken on the Aland Islands question furnishes proof to the world that the League, even in its present state, is an efficient world court for hearing international difficulties and forestalling conflicts between nations. All that the League needs to make it a most effective and certain instrument of reducing future wars to the absolute minimum is the participation of the United States. Sweden and the other nations of the world await the entrance of America with anxiety and the keenest interest."

Referring to Sweden's position concerning the Aland Islands, Premier Branting pointed out that Sweden never would give up the islands, which, he declared, are essentially Swedish. Sweden has suggested a plebiscite to prove her claim, the Premier said, but the Council has not yet decided what means it will employ, and three commissioners will make an investigation.

Premier Branting expressed the belief that the commissioners' report will recommend return of the islands to Swedish sovereignty. Their inquiry will disprove the Finnish contention that the majority of the islanders are Finns, Premier Branting asserted, and the islanders themselves have expressed strongly a desire to be joined with Sweden.

M. Enckell, Finnish Minister in Paris, declared today that the League of Nations' conclusions on Saturday, when the Council of the League decided it had the right to act as arbitrator between Sweden and Finland in the Aland Islands controversy and announced its intention of appointing a commission of three to investigate the question, were based on inaccurate premises, inadmissible by Finland.

M. Enckell also protests against the concusions drawn at the recent conference of jurists. He is sending his protest to M. Bourgeois today.

Exception to the declarations of Hjalmar Branting, Swediah Premier, which appeared in the French papers this morning that Sweden was determined never to relinquish their sovereignty in the Aland Islands, was taken by M. Enckell.

A public meeting of the League Council will be held tomorrow to deliberate on the situation created by the protest.

The House of Oriental Treasures

This Oriental Shop is a Veritable Museum of All that is Rare and Fine in Oriental Art and Craftsmanship

IT is decidedly worth while to visit the Oriental Shop with exactly the same attitude that one visits a museum; for it is a museum of all the rare and fine in Oriental art and craftsmanship. As gift shop for the expensive, the luxurious, or the simple and exquisite but inexpensive gift, it has untold possibilities.

Case after case is glowing with exquisite specimens of Oriental art; carved jades, tourmalines, crystals, agates, for personal wear and cabinets. Rare bits of china and pottery, old clair de lune, sang de boeuf and crackle ware, marvelous old crystals, flawless and beautifully carved, figurines and Qwen Yens in old paste and coral and semi-precious stones.

Blue-and-white vase with teakwood base and carved teakwood cover

Collectors of jade amulets and cabinet pieces will find the collection of Feits Su a rarely beautiful and interesting one.

Old Chinese and Japanese stuffs, such as embroidered priests' robes and obi cloths, are gorgeous, and are to be found in an unusually wide array of weaves and color.

Interior decorators will find this shop a mine of suggestions and possibilities. Not only ornaments and stuffs for the formal and elaborate house, but all sorts of amusing and whimsical things for the gay country house or small apartment where the vivid Oriental note is particularly in keeping.

Rarely Beautiful Furniture From the Orient

In this House of Oriental Treasures new cases of goods from out of China and Japan are daily being opened. Cases containing furniture and bibelots rarely seen outside of the homes of the Chinese noble, brought here for us to use in our town houses this winter or for our country houses and gardens next season. They are things that represent months of careful collecting by our commissioner, things that were bought not merely with money, but with knowledge and keenness of discrimination, with constant elimination of the things not the finest, and with consistently good taste.

Much that is Oriental is not exquisite taste; the House of Oriental Treasures has the rare, the fine, and the difficult-to-obtain, the things that are not made for the "trade" but that are used by the most exacting of cultured Chinese.

Teakwood Furniture

Dignified teakwood furniture of great charm and simplicity, the sort so rarely ever brought to this country, is to be had in several types of chairs and tables.

Long, narrow tables of the console type, originally the base of an altar, are of very old and of finely seasoned teakwood. They are so simple in their design and so fine in their proportions that they harmonize with the furniture of the modern home as does a fine Chinese vase or hanging. They may be used as consoles in the dining room or reception hall, or, in the smaller types, as occasional tables to hold bibelots or books or flowers. As stands for important lamps made of Chinese vases they are most appropriate and very attractive. All of these tables are carved beautifully, with simple delicate designs in relief, which distinguishes them from most Chinese tables that are brought to this country. These tables are priced from $60 to $300.

Small side chairs, suitable for the dining room or to be used as occasional chairs, are on Chippendale lines, simplified and adapted to the wood. These are very fine of surface and most dignified. To be had in sets of six or singly at $50 each. The cabinet-work on these, which are modern, of course, is done with a life-time's use in view.

Carved teakwood arm-chair, suitable for hall or library

Arm-chairs, very wide and deep, of the type that is particularly attractive in a formal reception hall, or to be used at each side of a fireplace, are of the simple cut-out carved type characteristic of the finer chairs used in the Chinese homes. One of these is sketched at the lower part of this page. Price $50.

Chairs on the old "round-about" type, with reversible teakwood seats that may be lifted out, $75 each. Besides this, there are many other kinds of teakwood furniture to be had in the Oriental Shop—small, delicately made desks, the type a woman likes to use, jardiniere stands, old carved tabarets and small stands for vases.

Jardinieres and Vases in Many Types of Fine Oriental Ware

A great deal of thought and careful selection was used in bringing this collection of vases and jardinieres to the Oriental Shop. Every piece has a definite decorative value and a place in the modern house. There are vases suitable for lamp bases, to be used singly or in pairs, that add dignity or firmness, or a glowing bit of color, or a bit of whimsical charm to any room in the house.

Covered jars in powder blue and blue-and-white ware are particularly good. Some beautifully carved teakwood bases and covers have been made for these and designed in exactly the right period in carrying out the Chinese spirit. A blue and white vase of this type is sketched at the left of this page. Ginger jars and covered jars in many shapes and sizes in the lovely blue-and-white Hawthorne ware and in other ware are, in a wide range of prices. Many of these would make attractive lamps for the boudoir or for the breakfast room. The prices, according to size and ware, are $3.50, $4.50, $6.50, $9.50, $18.50, $22.50 and $25.

Black Vases

Vases with that delicious black glass that resembles the bronzy black of the ripe olive. These are important enough to be used in pairs on the mantelpiece in the drawing-room. They are also very charming when filled with gayly colored flowers with long stems. The decorative possibilities of these vases are infinite. As lamp bases they are exquisite. Covered jars in this ware are delicately traced with chinoserie in gold.

All black vases, various shapes and sizes: 8" high, $5; 12" high, $12.50; 18" high, $35.

Black - and - gold covered jars are from $40 to $60.

Nankin Crackle Curio Ware

This softly colored beautifully carved ware with its deep ivory colored background and its soft gray and blue and rose Chinese figures comes in a variety of charming shapes characteristic of this particular ware. Small vases from 8" at $2 up to 18" at $25, with a range in between. A covered Nankin crackle ware vase is sketched at the upper right on this page.

Covered vase of Nankin crackle curio ware in soft colors

Bronze and Cloisonne Ware

Cloisonne on porcelain, that charming ware difficult to obtain, is to be had in vases, jars, fern dishes and beautiful shapes suitable for very attractive lamps. In this ware one can get a small choice vase at $6.50 and up to $125, according to size and the fineness of the workmanship.

Porcelain garden seat and jardiniere of black-and-white Hawthorne ware

Jardinieres and Garden Seats

Jardinieres in Nankin crackle curio ware are in a range of sizes from a 10" jardiniere at $20 up to a huge 22" at $300. There are also very lovely ones in blue-and-white ware decorated with the arabesque scroll or the famous lotus design and others.

Garden seats of porcelain in Chinese medallion in blue and white ware are $50.

At the lower right of the page a jardiniere and garden seat are illustrated.

GERMANS TURN IN TROPHY ARMS FIRST

750,000 MARKS PAID OUT

One Old Woman Arrives with a Cart Containing Ten Machine Guns and 180 Revolvers.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 18.—"Deliver up your weapons," great posters all over Berlin have been shouting for some time past. Wednesday was the first disarmament day, but at first the people were rather suspicious. It began to be believed yesterday, however, that there really was no trick in the matter, and a brisk business in arms and ammunition set in. Government depots were established in various parts of the city, and at nearly all of them yesterday and today there were queues of people waiting to dispose of their war trophies.

As is known this disarmament is in accordance with the demand of the Entente and is mainly aimed at the Einwohnerwehr, a semi-military, semi-police force, the existence of which is regarded as outside the terms of the Versailles Peace Treaty. One hundred marks is being paid for every rifle, 30 for revolvers and 1,000 for machine guns, so the people are parting with their war trophies. Up to the present it is mainly French and British rifles, &c., which are being surrendered, and few German weapons have been handed over as yet.

At some depots there were curious incidents. At one an aged man with a basket full of rifles appeared, while at another an old woman arrived with a cart, on which she brought ten machine guns and 180 revolvers. When the spectators saw her cartload there were loud cheers for this warlike dame. The value of her arsenal was 15,400 marks. In the centre of the city a young woman attracted much attention by dragging a small trench mortar through the streets. To another depot many people brought aged flintlocks, the military value of which is extremely doubtful, but they were all taken. All weapons were broken up immediately by smiths, and ammunition and hand grenades were rendered useless on the spot.

Already 750,000 marks has been paid out at various depots.

lain to invest trust funds in these bonds.

"As an inducement to build, exemptions from the following taxes are granted during the term of the mortgage to the owner of the land: 1, Real property tax on the building; 2, Real property tax on increase of value of the land, 3, Income tax on the income from the premises. In addition the principal and interest of the trust bonds are likewise freed from taxation.

"A tentative provision is included in the latter part of Section 8, permitting the Commissioners, upon the approval of the Board of Standards and Appeals, to suspend the operation of any law or ordinance with respect to the construction of the buildings to be erected.

Other Bills Carry Out No. 1.

"In order to complete the scheme and to meet constitutional objections, four companion measures are proposed.

"Bill No. 2 amends Section 205 of the charter so as to allow the investment of the sinking fund in these trust bonds.

"Bill No. 3 authorizes the appointment by the Mayor of a director of housing, with necessary employes.

"Bill No. 4 amends the tax law in the five particulars mentioned above, and also by an exemption of the mortgages from tax, all in consideration of the erection of the new building.

"Bill No. 5 amends the General Business Law so as to permit the charge of 7 per cent. interest upon the mortgage. It should be noted that the difference between this rate and that of 6 per cent. paid on the trust bonds, furnishes a reserve against possible loss and that the rate to the borrower is really but 4 per cent., owing to the exemption from taxes.

"The proposed legislation in Bill No. 1 was carefully considered from every possible angle and I feel confident that if the supplemental legislation provided for in the other bills in the group be enacted concurrently, Bill No. 1, in my view, will not violate any provisions of the Constitution of this State.

"The housing situation in this city is extremely acute. The responsibility rests upon the officials of the municipality to take every possible legal means to alleviate the present and growing conditions with which the city is confronted. While these proposed measures may not offer a complete solution of the entire housing problem, they will, I am sued by the government and sold to to relieve the acuteness of the situation."

Mayor Hylan sent the following memorandum to Senator Lockwood with the five bills:

"The proposed bill is based upon the so-called 'rentes' system long established in France, whereby bonds are issued by the Government and sold to small investors and the proceeds used to aid, by cheap mortgage loans, the development of improvements on real estate.

"An emergency is declared to exist, provisions for the relief of which are provided to be extended over a period of fifteen years.

"The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund are constituted trustees of a special trust fund, to establish which they are authorized to provide for the issuance and sale of building loan trust bonds, 6 per cent. tax-exempt bonds maturing within fifteen years, in denomination of $250 and upward.

"The proceeds are held by the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund in a trust fund, out of which 7 per cent. mortgage loans, maturing within fifteen years and paid by installments annually, graduated in decreasing ratio as the emergency diminishes, may be granted by the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund to the owners of vacant land for the construction thereon of dwellings, tenements or apartment houses, up to 80 per cent. of the actual cost of construction. The net cost of the mortgage is less than 4 per cent. because of the tax relief granted.

"The fund being a special trust fund, held by the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund in trust, and the bonds being issued only against that fund, the credit of the city is not affected.

"Trust funds, including the sinking funds, held by the city, may be invested in the building loan trust bonds thus created.

"The guarantee against loss to the trust fund, to protect the payment of the bonds at maturity, is provided by a reserve of one per centum per annum, the difference between the interest charged on the mortgage and the interest paid on the bonds."

Delegations representing varied interests will go to Albany to present propositions for housing relief. Among them will be representatives of the civic and commercial organizations, the real estate interests, organized labor, the building trades' employers and the hotel association.

Would Commandeer Material.

Organized labor will submit a definite program to the Legislature, in accordance with conclusions reached at a general conference held recently in Mount Vernon. The building workers recommend that supplies of building material be commandeered, if necessary.

In explaining the plan John Gill, representative of Local 37 of the Bricklayers' International Union, said: "The only way to relieve the housing situation is to build and to stop talking about building. We will supply the men if the State will commandeer the materials."

The masons approved Samuel Untermyer's threat to expose profiteering in building materials, and declared that they would support him in his efforts to lower the cost of materials. They also discussed the advisability of procuring brick manufactories. In this connection it was pointed out that the Bricklayers', Masons and Plasterers' Union has been operating such a plant in Southwestern Texas for more than six years. The question of purchasing a New York plant was referred to the Executive Committee.

The delegation of masons and bricklayers which will attend the special session consists of Daniel Connell, President; Louis Masola, First Vice President; Thomas Cahill, Second Vice President; Andrew O'Brien, Third Vice President; James Woods, Fourth Vice President; Thomas Rafferty, Fifth Vice President, and Robert Nethercott, Secretary-Treasurer.

Richard C. Chittick, Executive Secretary of the Real Estate Board of New York, issued a statement yesterday on the board's housing program, in which he said:

"The board recommends for permanent relief amendments to the rent laws which will make them no less an obstacle to unjust rent raising but less of an economic obstacle; or, failing this, that the Legislature give the rules adopted by the Municipal Court Justices the force of law. It urges the exemption of the interest on mortgages from the provisions of the income tax law, so as to bring mortgage money into the construction field, and it suggests that perhaps the savings banks could lend on bond and mortgage nearly up to the legal 65 per cent. of their deposits. The banking law should also be amended so as to utilize the State Land Bank to its highest efficiency."

Several suggestions for emergency legislation are made.

For the ten years that Gimbels have been selling Society Brand and other clothes in New York it has been our plan, in so far as public announcement was concerned, to refer to all clothing we sold as "our" clothing. We have referred to the makers as "the best."
NOW we believe that the time has come when men are more anxious than ever to know just what kind of clothes they are buying.

We found that of all the makers represented in our clothing shop's stock there was none that we could exploit as enthusiastically, for style correctness and quality excellence, as Society Brand Clothes—"for young men and men who stay young." And we found that the makers of Society Brand Clothes would be equally proud to have Gimbels represent them in Greater New York.

So now the world may know—Gimbels is the recognized headquarters for Society Brand Clothes.

New style changes for Fall as correctly interpreted by Society Brand Clothes will be heartily welcomed by men who pay particular heed to their appearance.

The long vent in the coat has gone. Vents in modish suits this Fall will be noticeably shorter.

Body contours have changed. The high waist-line and the pinched-in effect have gone.

Coats hang with greater fullness from the shoulder. The result is a pleasing effect of unusual ease and smartness.

GERMAN CABINET SHOWS WEAKNESS

Signs Increase That Government Cannot Meet Serious Problems Now Coming Up.

FIRST BREAK IN MINISTRY

Dr. Wirth Said to Have Offered Resignation—Majority Socialists Still Refuse Support.

BY GEORGE RENWICK.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 18.—The German Government looks as though it was beginning to totter. As I said when it took office, it was a good Government for the Summer when nobody was worrying much about politics, but the approach of Winter brings more serious problems.

It is stated that Dr. Wirth, Finance Minister, has tendered his resignation to President Ebert. The matter will be considered and a decision taken next week at the first Cabinet meeting after the holidays. The immediate cause of the resignation appears to be differences between Wirth and Giesberts, Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, regarding the expenditure of the latter Minister's department. It is probable, however, that Wirth finds the chaos in the financial situation really beyond him.

There are many other signs of weakness in the Government. The Food Minister is giving satisfaction to no party and the distribution is as bad as ever. Since the beginning of the war public hopes have been raised by official reports of a coming good harvest, only to learn later that the outlook was dark. This department, too, yields practically to all demands of the agrarians intent on pushing prices, already disastrously high, still higher.

Groner, Minister of Public Works, has alienated the great mass of working classes, and of Gessler, Noske's successor as Minister of Defense, Vorwärts remarks that the less said the better.

Feelers continue to be thrown out toward the Majority Socialists with a view to obtaining their active co-operation, but, conscious of its growing strength since the split took place in the Independent Socialist ranks, that party shows little inclination to prop up the Ministry by allowing members of the party to enter the Government.

It is thought that a crisis involving recourse to new elections may not be long in supervening.

THREE BOYS ESCAPE ELMIRA

"Trusties" Are Later Captured After One is Wounded by Shot in Arm.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Three inmates of the New York State Reformatory who escaped at an early hour this morning and were captured late tonight at a point five miles west of this city, near a railroad crossing leading into corning. The capture was effected by Chief Guard D. M. Espey only after a battle, in which Donald Dudley of Buffalo, 16, youngest of the trio of refugees, was shot through the right arm.

The three youths, who were "trusties," after creeping from the reformatory gardens through a field of grain, hid in ditches until nightfall. When the guards located them, young Dudley responded to a demand to surrender by diving straight at the gun of the chief guard. The latter shot in such a manner as merely to disable the young desperado. Chief Guard Espey then brought the three into the institution unaided.

Recautpred After 4 Hours' Freedom.

BEDFORD, Sept. 19.—While eating a plate of ice cream after escaping from the State Reformatory for Women in Bedford today, Pearl Allen and Bernice Law, two prisoners, were recaptured by a State Policeman after four hours' freedom.

"Music has taken such an important part in our home life since our Vocalion came."

The AEOLIAN VOCALION

The Phonograph that you can play

"OF course we always enjoyed music, more or less, but now—why Billy and I don't go out half as much as we used to—he says the Vocalion, and especially its Graduola, is the best anti-club and anti-cabaret argument he knows of.

"What is the Graduola? Oh, it is an attachment for controlling the expression. You can get the loveliest effects—effects you never heard before on a phonograph. The Vocalion is the only phonograph that has the Graduola and really it just doubles the pleasure to be derived—it is so simple to operate and so fascinating.

"Last night Billy and Dad spent half an hour on one record—the 'Berceuse' from 'Jocelyn'—discussing which part should be played 'forte' and which 'piano'. After you study the records a bit you can obtain the most subtle and beautiful gradations of tone imaginable. Expressions of fleeting moods such as the artists use when they sing or play for an audience, but which they cannot record for a phonograph.

"Actually I think the Vocalion is developing our musical taste, too. I had a much more intelligent idea of that 'Berceuse' after the discussion about it the other night. Such a half hour with the Graduola is like a half hour's lesson in 'Musical Appreciation'.

"Oh, yes, the Vocalion is complete without the Graduola. I've never heard such richness and power of tone in any other phonograph. It is perfect for dancing—so live and real the tones are, you never seem to tire. I told mother the other day the Vocalion is the last thing in our home I'd be willing to part with."

The Aeolian-Vocalion is the phonograph that is made by the world's leading musical instrument manufacturers. It is, in itself, the strongest evidence that could be presented as to what years of experience in building musical instruments means.

Its tone quality—pure, distinctive, real—is obviously the result of experience in developing musical instrument tone.

Its cases—simple and gracious in design and gleaming with a soft and deep lustre—bespeak the workmanship accustomed to producing the costly and beautiful cases of fine pianos.

Its wonderful Graduola—the most interesting and important addition ever made to the phonograph—makes that instrument for the first time playable and hence immeasurably increases its musical value and fascination.

WOMAN STRANGLED NEAR GRAVE OF SON

Posses of Veterans Seek Mrs. Grembowicz's Murderer in South Amboy, N. J.

FAILED TO RETURN FRIDAY

Sons Found Body After All-Night Search—Robbery Supposed Motive.

Posses made up largely of members of the American Legion yesterday searched all thickets and woods near South Amboy, N. J., for the man who is believed to have slain Mrs. Mary Grembowicz, 66 years old, on Friday while she was leaving the grave of her son in Ernston Cemetery on the outskirts of the town. Mrs. Grembowicz had been missing from her home since early Friday and her sons did not find her body until late Saturday afternoon.

Death was caused by strangulation after a terrific struggle, according to the autopsy report made public yesterday by Medical Examiner William Surdem of South Amboy, who expressed the opinion that the aged woman was attacked by a powerful man. The throat had heavy finger marks upon it, and the physicians said that death appeared to have followed the pressure on her neck with more than usual quickness, showing that her assailant must have been unusually powerful.

The motive for the murder is believed by the police to have been robbery, because the fiction had been passed around amon the neighbors of the Grembowicz family that Mrs. Grembowicz had been in the habit of carrying around large amounts in cash and Liberty bonds. Her husband Michael, who is 74 years old, denied last night at the family home at 235 Cedar Street, South Amboy, that she ever had more than a few dollars with her.

Her sons, Michael and George, led the posses searching yesterday for the murderer. They said that their mother had been in the habit of visiting the cemetery almost daily since their brother died in the influenza epidemic two years ago. Hardly a week passed that she did not place a wreath upon his grave.

The spot where the body was found is close to the tracks of the Camden and Amboy Railroad, three-quarters of a mile from South Amboy and near the cemetery. There her sons came upon the body after an all night search in the vicinity. When she failed to return to dinner on Friday her husband and sons became alarmed and organized a posse to search for her. They found no trace of her until shortly before noon on Saturday.

Assistant Prosecutor Coan instructed County Detective Peltier to investigate.

EXPECT SECT TO EMIGRATE.

"Holy Ghost and Us" Leader May Found African Colony.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 19.—The belief that the Rev. Frank W. Sandford, leader of the "Holy Ghost and Us" sect, is soon to attempt to found a colony in South Africa was strengthened today when the schooner yacht Coronet, which has been at anchor in the harbor ten years, was hauled on a marine railway for extensive repairs.

The colony at Shiloh, on the sand hills of Durham, is practically depopulated and a current report, based on statements said to have been made by deserting colonists, is that Sandford, realizing that his control here has ended, will take a few of the faithful and found a new home for his followers on African shores.

WANTS FARMER IN CABINET.

American Federation Also Demands Study to Prevent Price Fluctuations.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—The American Federation today adopted resolutions demanding representation for farmers and stock raisers in the Cabinet and opposing Government price-fixing of farm products. The resolutions also demanded that the Government "make a study of the agricultural products and cost of producing, so that frequent, abnormal and ruinous fluctuations in prices of farm products may be avoided," and urged revision of the tariff on agricultural and farm produce.

The resolutions "especially demand that the Secretary of Agriculture be a practical farmer."

TO BACK RESERVE SYSTEM.

Credit Men's Association Calls on Business People for Support.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 19.—Directors of the National Association of Credit Men today called upon business men of the country to fight any move to limit or eliminate the Federal Reserve banking system.

"The nation should feel grateful for the ability the Federal Reserve Banks have shown to cope with the unusual conditions and to stabilize the tendencies of men in the readjustment period," says the statement.

"The powers and abilities of the Federal Reserve system must be used always for the checking of unwise speculation," it said. "The speculative and profiteering temperament at this juncture of the nation's business should be rebuked and controlled at every turn."

Can you sleep in a strange bed

YOU know the relief at getting back home after trying to sleep in someone's guest-room bed.

Your own bed "fits" you, while the strange one does not!

Neither of them built for sleep.

You may grow used to the whims and cranks of your own bed—but you can never perfectly relax until you find a bed built for sleep.

A wooden bed has no place in the modern sanitary household. The longer it has been in the family, the worse for the person who sleeps in it.

And in the interests of sleep, the ordinary iron bed is no better. Its creak and rattle a strain on the nerves. Its crude design an offence to the eye.

A woman will welcome Simmons Metal Beds. Not only sanitary, but noiseless—built for sleep.

She will welcome the Twin Beds. A separate bed for each sleeper—in her own room, the guest room and the children's room.

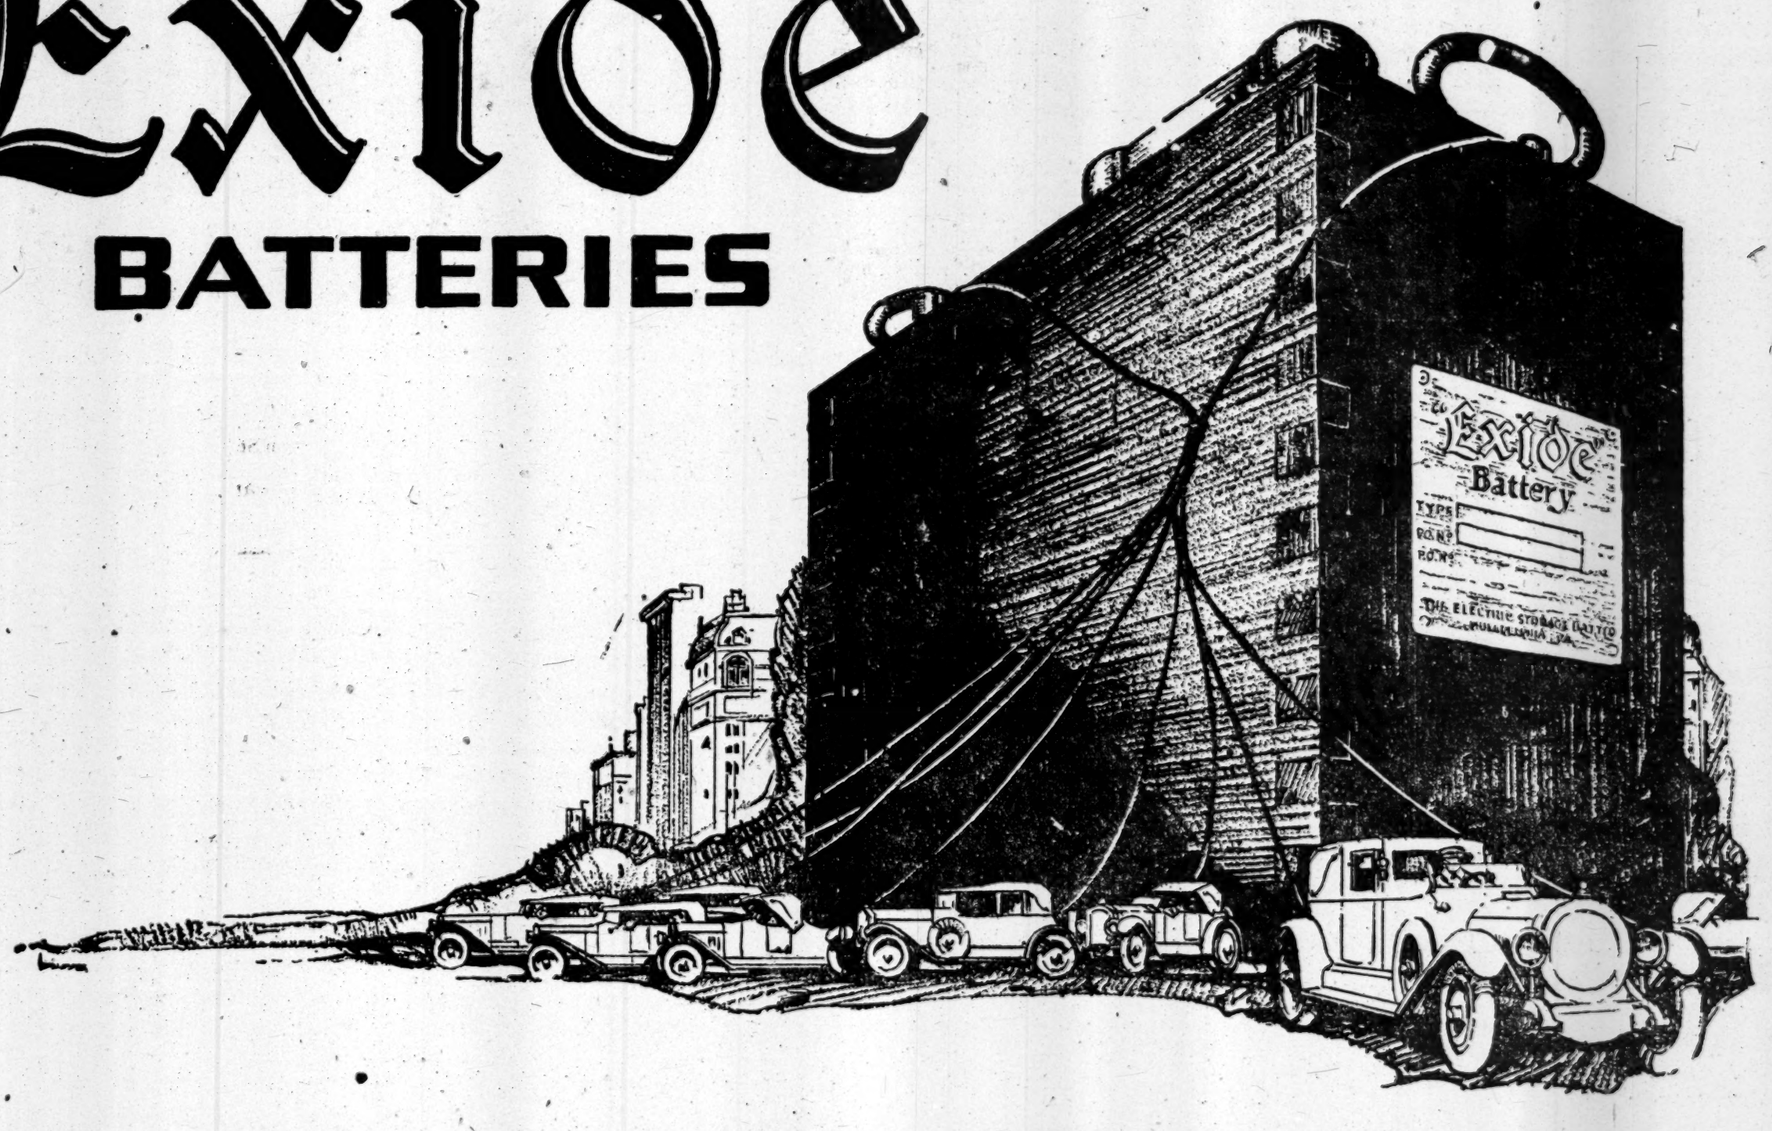
BATTERIES



The First Automobile Starting Battery

Not so long ago all automobiles were cranked by hand. The year 1911 saw the first car regularly furnished with electric starting and lighting equipment. It had an Exide Battery. Every car of this make since then, and hundreds of thousands of other automobiles, have placed their reliance in Exide Batteries.

The first starting and lighting battery was made possible through the experience of the manufacturers of Exide in building batteries for every industrial and government purpose since the beginning of the battery industry. In fact, the entire evolution of the storage battery is little else than a record of the makers of Exide Batteries.

Today Exides are used by the navies of various nations, the Bell telephone system, Marconi wireless, in 95% of the central stations of our great cities, in industrial trucks, mine locomotives, for lighting farm homes, and for a score of other purposes where a battery must have lasting power.

Back of every Exide is the experience and resources of the oldest and largest manufacturers of storage batteries in the world.

B. R. T. STRIKERS ASK SMITH TO MEDIATE

Conference Will Also Request Compers to Appeal to President Wilson.

CITE CHICAGO WAGE SCALE

They Propose a Mass Meeting to Hear an Address on Collective Bargaining.

At a conference of sixty-two delegates representing 60,000 members of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes of America, at the Labor Lyceum, Willoughby and Myrtle Avenues, Brooklyn, yesterday, it was decided to send a committee of three to wait on Governor Alfred E. Smith at Albany, appealing to him to intercede for an amicable settlement of the B. R. T. strike. Steps also were taken to send another committee of three delegates to Washington to meet Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, who, it is said, has arranged a conference with President Wilson and officials of the United States Labor Department, whose aid will be asked in settling the strike.

This information was given out at the headquarters of the association, in the Hotel Continental, last night. A report signed by J. J. McLaughlin, Chairman of the meeting, and John Parker, the Secretary, which was unanimously approved, said in part:

"We desire to call to the attention, first, of the Governor of the State of New York the fact that the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company is operating under franchise and rights granted to it by the State of New York and the City of New York, which gives it a monopoly in the streets of Brooklyn, and that for those rights it owes to the men and women who operate the property fair play and a living wage.

"The motormen and conductors of Chicago receive 80 cents per hour for their work in the day time and 82 cents an hour for their work at night, and no man receives less than eight hours' pay in any one day. Compare these conditions with those of the employes of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system, who receive 62 cents per hour or less.

"We further recommend that the committee of this body be instructed to call the Federal Government's attention to the fact that during the war there was loaned to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company $13,000,000 of this nation's money to assist them in the operation of these railway lines, and that they are now using this money to coerce and deprive these workmen of a living wage. We would point out to them that over 400 of these men donned the uniform of the United States and fought to preserve the nation and to establish what we have been told was liberty and justice.

"We would further recommend that a strong appeal be sent out to all labor organizations for their co-operation and financial support, and believe that arrangement should be made for a general mass meeting of all labor, to be held in the near future, to which the working men and women of New York and New Jersey shall be invited and that President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor be requested to address this meeting upon the subject, 'Labor's Right to Organize and the Principle of Collective Bargaining.'"

Amusement resorts in Coney Island suffered a loss of between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 in patronage because of the strike, according to reports made by park managers to Samuel W. Bumpertz, President of the Coney Island Board of Trade. Attendance picked up during the Mardi Gras celebration and the receipts on Saturday night came close to a season's record. Luna Park, Steeplechase and some of the smaller parks closed for the season last night, but a few will remain open for a week longer.

Service on the B. R. T. lines was reported fairly satisfactory yesterday.

1,476 STILL HELD ON SHIP.

Steerage Passengers Aboard the Aquitania Await Inspection.

The 1,476 steerage passengers who arrived from France and England on the Cunarder Aquitania on Friday afternoon are still on board the ship at Pier 54, North River, foot of West Thirteenth Street. The officers on duty yesterday said they hoped the immigration officials would either examine them on board today or take them ashore, as the Aquitania is due to leave at noon tomorrow for Cherbourg and Southampton and has to be cleaned up ready to receive the eastbound passengers.

The White Star Liner Olympic was in the same dilemma on Friday last, and the steerage had to be examined on board so that she could leave on Saturday.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT
to every smoker of Robt. Burns Cigars

FIRST let us make plain three facts:

[1]

During the past few years the prices of Havana and Sumatra tobaccos have steadily advanced. The profit on Robt. Burns Cigar has at times fallen distinctly below a safe business margin. This margin of profit has at times approached the vanishing point

[2]

At no time have we compromised in the slightest the quality of Robt. Burns Cigar. To this formula we stand committed: Full, long-leaf Havana filler of fine selection, toned to agreeable mildness through our special process of curing and wrapped in the finest obtainable Sumatra leaf.

[3]

Our latest purchases of Havana and Sumatra leaf for Robt. Burns were made with our usual care and after the widest possible survey of market conditions.

Yet for that leaf we had to pay much higher prices than ever before

IT IS OUR BELIEF that the smoker of Robt. Burns would much prefer to pay a slight advance in price rather than face the slightest let-down in the quality of his cigar.

To maintain that quality it has become imperative that we add 2c apiece to the retail price of Robt. Burns Cigar.

The price of Robt. Burns Invincible is now changed to 15c; the new price of Longfellow is 17c.

There are no indications in sight at the present to warrant a decline in the price of Havana and Sumatra leaf tobacco. When such time arrives, we promise that the smokers of Robt. Burns Cigars will receive the benefit at the earliest possible moment.

The Captive Cap

You Can't Lose It!

Opens This Way

The Finishing Touch!

NOT that anything was needed to increase the esteem in which Kolynos is held by its millions of friends in America and England and ten or twelve other countries.

For wherever the profession of dentistry flourishes and people are accustomed to take the best possible care of their teeth and gums and mouths, there Kolynos is held in highest esteem!

But men and women—and boys and girls—will lose things; and one of the things most easily lost is the cap on a tube of dental cream.

Such loss means that the air gets to the cream, and dust settles around the neck of the tube, and the cream is squeezed out and wasted.

We have always been punctiliously careful about the condition of Kolynos when it reaches you and while you are using a tube of it.

So we have added the finishing touch—which is the Captive Cap.

You can't lose it, whether you are at home or travelling, and it's always there to be put right back on the tube. Look for the Captive Cap, used exclusively on takes care of the teeth perfectly—cleanses them without the use of grit, and dissolves the film under which plaques of destructive bacteria flourish. But it does not stop there. It strengthens the gums and leaves the entire mouth in a sweet, wholesome, purified condition.

THE SCREEN

After an absence of some months from Broadway screens, Dorothy Gish returns this week in "Little Miss Rebellion," at the Rialto, but she is still without an adequate story. Her talent for burlesque, if nothing else, deserves something more substantial than the empty farces in which she has been seen for a long time. She can, in fact, do more than burlesque. In "Hearts of the World" she made a real person of the irrepressible ballad singer, but since then she has done nothing memorable. She has appeared, for the most part, in mechanical makeshifts almost entirely dependent upon her antics, which, though amusing, cannot fill five reels or more of the stuff that photoplays must be made of to be entertaining.

In the present case Miss Gish's lack of material is especially to be regretted, because "Little Miss Rebellion" could have been exactly the thing for her. It is a story of a capricious and irresponsible young Grand Duchess of Molvania who is much more interested in the American soldiers within her country and their sports than in the business of being a ruler, and when a band of musical comedy Bolsheviki forces her to fly from her palace she is glad because she "won't have to be a Grand Duchess any more." She finds her real fun in flipping pancakes in a New York restaurant.

This theme could have been developed into a genuine burlesque. The Grand Duchess Marie Louise might have been a real character, and her anxiety lest the revolutionists fail in their plot against her throne might have been used as the centre of a delightful comedy. But the story passes by its opportunity with only a glance or two in its direction, and hurries on to the meaningless adventures of the heroine in New York, which include, of course, a meeting with the soldier in whom she had been most interested and the final overthrow of the revolutionists. Then it closes abruptly, as if not knowing what to do next, and remembering suddenly that it has consumed the film footage necessary for an orthodox "feature."

Ralph Graves as the American soldier, George Selgman as the leader of the revolutionists, Riley Hatch as a faithful retainer of the Grand Duchess, and Marie Burke as her lady-in-waiting, are among the principal members of the cast, and as good as mechanical figures can be. They have little chance to be anything else.

George Fawcett, that incomparable character actor who has recently turned director, had charge of the production, but, so far as could be noticed, did little or nothing to compensate the public for his absence from the screen. "Little Miss Rebellion" is not noteworthy, pictorially or otherwise, whereas Mr. Fawcett's impersonations have never failed to be distinctive.

William S. Hart's earnestness and the picturesque quality of his appearance and acting seldom fail to impart something of character to any story in which he appears, no matter how stereotyped it may be, and such is the case with "The Cradle of Courage," at the Rivoli this week, in which Mr. Hart takes the part of the crook who goes to the war, returns with a changed attitude toward life, decides to go straight, and finally succeeds in undoing the criminals with whom he had been associated. Since the armistice stories of this kind have been rather frequent, and there is nothing new or peculiarly true in "The Cradle of Courage," but Hart's characterization of the hero and the definite work of Gertrude Claire as his police-hating mother and of Thomas Santschi as the leader of the gang of crooks give it a vitality not possessed by some of its contemporaries. Ann Little, as the heroine, is rather negative, but meets essential requirements. The production was adapted and directed by Lambert Hillyer from a story by Frederick Bradbury.

The Rivoli pictorial this week contains a number of interesting pictures, especially X-ray photographs of a man's hand, wrist, knee and foot in motion.

Madison Square Garden, having been used for almost everything else that crowds go to see and hear, has now become a motion-picture theatre for the week, to show the batting Babe Ruth's first flies in the films, "Headin' Home," which opened last night. Whenever a celebrity of the sport world or divorce court appears in pictures, the public, as a rule, doesn't expect much in the way of story and acting, and usually doesn't get as much as it expects, chiefly because the celebrity takes himself or herself and the picture seriously and attempts to be heroic. It is, therefore, of moment to record that Babe Ruth and "Headin' Home" do not deal, except occasionally and briefly, in the regulation movie stuff. They try for comedy, not heroics, and score not infrequently. The picture is really entertaining in places—and that's a lot to say for a production of its kind. It would be better if it were only two reels long—there's not enough to it to fill more—but let it go as it is, and thank it for what it does. Also there are many excellent pictures of Babe Ruth in it—and he is an interesting person.

In the story Babe is the small town bumpkin. "Bugs" Baer's captions good naturedly poke fun at him, and he is entirely receptive. Best of all, he can't play ball—until he gets mad one day and knocks his first home run, through a church window five blocks away. Then he seems to get on to the thing, joins a team, and some time later signs a big league contract, which entitles him to return home a hero—but not so heroic that one must forget him as the likable country boy. Just how he became famous is not shown, the story skipping about rather aimlessly, not bothered by continuity and things like that, but everybody knows, anyhow, that Babe Ruth can bat, so it is all accepted on the face of it—and the picture of the hero knocking a long home run in the Polo Grounds is a genuine thriller.

The photoplay at the Strand this week is "Good Reference," with Constance Talmadge, and the Capitol is offering Basil King's "Earthbound," seen recently at the Astor. The films that remain are D. W. Griffith's "Way Down East" at the Forty-fourth Street, "While New York Sleeps" at the Lyric, "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse" at the Astor, and "The Restless Sex" at the Criterion.

MISS NEVADA SINGS IN PARIS.

Makes Her Debut at the Opera Comique in "La Vie de Boheme."

PARIS, Sept. 19.—Miss Mignon Nevada of New York, a young American singer, made her début at the Opéra Comique last night in the part of Mimi in "La Vie de Bohème." She achieved a great success and was accorded an enthusiastic reception.

Mignon Nevada made her first appearance in opera at Rome in 1908 as Rosina in "The Barber of Seville." She is the daughter of Emma Nevada, whose real name was Emma Nixon, an American operatic soprano well known in the eighties.

Chemical Show Opens Tonight.

More than 25,000 chemists are in New York to attend the opening of the sixth National Exposition of Chemical Industries in the Grand Central Palace at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The show will be the biggest of its kind yet held. There will be 460 exhibitors and the displays will occupy four floors. Dr. Charles H. Herty will deliver the address officially opening the show at 8 o'clock tonight.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Fred Stone's engagement at the Globe in "Tip-Top" is definitely announced to begin on Tuesday night, Oct. 5.

The cast of "Mecca," which opens at the Century on Oct. 4, includes Gladys Hanson, Lionel Braham, Kate Mayhew, Hannah Toback, Ida Mulle, Herbert Grimwood, John Doran, Orville Caldwell, Genevieve Delora and many others. There will be a ballet of sixty, rehearsed by Fokine.

Arthur Bowyer, seen here some seasons ago in "The New Sin," has arrived from England to appear in Galsworthy's "The Skin Game," which William A. Brady will produce next month.

"The Outrageous Mrs. Palmer," by Harry Wagstaff Gribble, has been placed in rehearsal by the Shuberts, with Mary Young in the leading role.

Minnie Dupree will act the title role in Rachel Barton Butler's "Mom," which Oliver Morosco is producing.

Belle Bennett will succeed Muriel Martin Harvey in the leading feminine role of "Happy-Go-Lucky" tonight.

The Farber Sisters will be added to "The Greenwich Follies" when that production is seen at the Shubert tonight.

CONCERT SEASON OPENS.

Harold Bauer and Toscha Seidel Win Encores in Joint Recital.

The New York concert season was formally opened last night, a bit in advance of its customary starting date, with a joint recital by Harold Bauer and Toscha Seidel at the Lexington Theatre. The concert, in addition to bringing these artists to the same stage for the first time, marked the first of a series of thirty-nine Sunday night concerts which are promised by the newly formed Musical Bureau of America.

The opening was auspicious in every way—which is to say, both artistically and practically. The spacious Lexington, sold out as long ago as Friday, held several rows of standees, and both Mr. Bauer and Mr. Seidel were called out for many more encores than their programs listed. The feature of the evening was their joint rendition of Brahms's sonata in D minor. Thereafter every number of both artists won encores, in particular the "Indian Snake Dance" and "Zapateade" of Mr. Seidel.

Mischa Appelbaum is the head of the new organization, which aims to offer noteworthy music at prices ranging as low as 50 cents. On next Sunday night Leopold Godowsky and Max Rosen will appear.

REPUBLICANS WARY OF SOCIALIST OUSTER

are to be submitted. This hearing will likely be held on Thursday. This date has been selected because of the Jewish holidays on Tuesday and Wednesday, when many of the Jewish members of the Senate and Assembly will be at their homes.

Louis Waldman, August Claessens, Samuel Orr, Samuel A. DeWitt and Charles Solomon, the five Socialists expelled from the Assembly last Spring and re-elected at the special elections on Thursday, left last night for Albany to claim seats at the special session of the Legislature which convenes there today. Shortly before taking the train they spoke at meetings at the New Star Casino, East 107th Street and Park Avenue, and at Hunt's Point Palace, East 163d Street and Southern Boulevard, the Bronx. Other speakers were Municipal Court Justice Jacob Panken, Abraham Cahan and B. Charney Vladeck.

"There was never a doubt in our minds or those of our friends as to the outcome of the special election, Claessens declared. "When we come into the Legislative Chamber tomorrow night we can very cheerfully say, 'Here we are again, are you going to repeat the blunder a second time?' If they insist upon ousting us again, within five or six weeks there will come another counting of noses.

"The air is full of rumors as to the nature of the reception planned for us. I have just been notified that a politician, whom I know to be of the cheap variety, is on his way to Albany to charge that I was guilty of electioneering. He will charge, too, that I waved a red shirtwaist at a meeting in Lenox Avenue. The red shirtwaist was the principal issue in the campaign in my district. I have since found that it belonged to a next door neighbor of mine."

Claessens followed up his discussion of the campaign with a plea for organization of Socialist thought into a compact body for the national and State elections, adding:

"Our job here is not half so hard as it would be in France or Russia. There we would be competing against the cream of the intellect of the two countries, which would make the Socialist attack very interesting. In this land we have to contend with brutality. Most of the intellect is on our side. What we need now is unity of forces instead of unity of argument."

Should the five Socialists be permitted to take their seats, they will offer a bill designed to relieve the housing situation by permitting municipalities to construct dwellings and to rent them at the carrying cost, and also a bill to prevent increases in rents for a certain specified period.

Should they be denied their seats by the Assembly, special action on the housing situation will be taken by the Socialist State Executive Committee, which has rented headquarters in the Dolan Building, 137 Broadway, Albany, from which the fight to prevent a second expulsion of the five Socialist Assemblymen-elect will be directed.

SCREEN PRESENTATION OF WILL CARLETON'S POEM
A TRIUMPH!!!
Here Is What The Critics Say:

"Its capacity for tear-water and gallery cheers is unlimited. It is impressive. Its assault upon the emotions is sweeping." NEW YORK TIMES.

"Wonderful it was—brought tears and rapture—kept first night spectators in their seats after final curtain, applauding." NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

"We feel bound to state that we do not care especially for motion pictures, but last night we saw Mary Carr, of whom we never heard before, play a mother as a mother probably never has been played, for the screen at least, before. Reviewers of pictures raved over the work of Vera Gordon in 'Humoresque' and reviewers of plays did the same over Emma Dunn in 'Mother' and 'Old Lady 31.' But let them see Mary Carr in this picture. It is safe to assert that the camera never has recorded a finer, more faithful piece of acting." JOURNAL OF COMMERCE.

"A remarkable impersonation of motherdom. So keen a picturization that your eyes fill—made with a fine, big spirit, a remembrance of youth, an appreciation of the eternal mother-soul, and excellent photography." NEW YORK AMERICAN.

"Draws tears—presses severe strain upon the handkerchief—will doubtless have a wide appeal." SUN-HERALD.

"It is so true and so vividly, yet simply, told that it impresses itself upon your memory as one of the high spots in film production." NEW YORK TELEGRAPH.

"It is a picture too fine, too human and tender to miss. The wondrous depths of maternal love are sounded in this picture, which grips the heart and holds it for two solid hours." NEW YORK COMMERCIAL.

"'Over the Hill To the Poorhouse' entered the Hall of Screen Fame at the Astor Theatre last night. It is a sure-fire hit." EVENING MAIL.

"The applause was sincere and the comment after the picture was of the kind that ought to justify the management in expecting a long run." EVENING SUN.

"Abounds with excellent humor and pathos and tells a story of genuine interest that is gripping." EVENING WORLD.

"New Fox film scores at Astor—brought tears even from most unwilling eyes. And it was funny—humanly, riotously funny." EVENING JOURNAL.

"It is the sort of play in which the battle is more than half won before it is started, because it comes pretty close to the heart strings of anyone who has a heart." EVENING POST.

"'An audience which included many distinguished persons gave it the hearty welcome which it so richly deserves and accorded not only the tribute of spontaneous laughter to the many delightful comedy scenes, but also paid that rarer tribute, the gift of sympathetic tears over the pathetic episodes in the story." EVENING TELEGRAM.

CLOSING APOLOGETIC MOUTHS.

The engaging but erratic DUDLEY FIELD MALONE expresses the hope that no "innocent persons" will be punished for the Wall Street murder by wholesale. He need not fear. No one not actually proved to have had a part in the monstrous crime will be made to suffer for it. The ones he has in mind, of course, are not the immediate criminals, but the apologists for anarchy, the railers at our "rotten" Government, the inciters to sedition and violence who themselves seek to keep on the shady side of the law.

The verbal activities of these gentlemen have suddenly ceased, and will probably be limited for some time to come. A death list of thirty-four is a little too much for them to contemplate or to explain away. When the previous bomb explosions did little damage except to houses and public buildings, there was much talk in near-anarchistic circles of either a "frame-up" or an exaggerated apprehension, stimulated by Attorney General PALMER for political ends, of the danger from a handful of half-cracked visionaries or lunatic Reds. But the present terrible work of assassins has dried all that up instantly. Many men and newspapers formerly voluble in apology or in making light of attempts at murder have gone silent. Perhaps even Senator HIRAM JOHNSON, even Senator BORAH, will think twice before again crying out upon wicked "international bankers" who would sell their country's honor and safety.

A CHEMISTS' WAR.

According to a report issued by the War Department, gas caused more casualties in the American Expeditionary Force in France than "gunshot missiles," which in previous wars decided most of the battles. There were formerly combats, it is true, in which artillery played a major part—that is to say, shell and shrapnel. In the great war shrapnel and shell not charged with gas were far down on the list as destructive agencies. The gases used by the enemy were most terrible in surprise attacks. Of 266,112 admissions to the American hospitals in France, 88,980 (or 33.4 per cent.) were due to gas, and no less than 38,396 to mustard gas, which the Germans were first to use in quantity. "Gunshot missiles" caused 32 per cent. of the American casualties, shrapnel 15.2 per cent. and shell 8 per cent. Much was heard in descriptions of trench fighting of the deadly hand grenade, but no more than 1,156 Americans were wounded by that ancient but improved method of attack. Only 245 were brought with bayonet wounds to the hospitals.

In comparing gas and "gunshot" casualties, which are close together on the list, it must be considered that the enemy often ran short of gas. Major Gen. WILLIAM L. SIBERT, Director of the Chemical Warfare Service, has said that the Germans were never able to manufacture more than ten or fifteen tons of mustard gas a day. At the time of the armistice the United States had completed a chlorine plant with a capacity of 100 tons a day. If the war had gone on, the American forces would have been supplied with enough mustard gas to overwhelm the enemy in every battle.

The subject is not a pleasant one, and it was difficult to interest Congress in the establishment of a permanent Chemical Warfare Service Bureau, to be attached to the War Department. One was authorized, however, in the Army Reorganization bill, which was passed just before Congress adjourned. There can be no doubt that, if there is another great war, gas will cause vastly more casualties than "gunshot missiles," a term that includes ammunition fired from machine guns, which on the fields of France were often used side by side over a far-extended front. General SIBERT, admitting that chemical warfare was at first viewed with horror and condemned as barbarous (it was felt that such an insidious agency should be forbidden), says:

> As soon as the scientific world developed means of protecting the soldier against it, and the various advantages, strategical and tactical, of its use became known, military men began to look upon it as a means of warfare that had come to stay and must be reckoned with.

It has become a commonplace of prediction that chemists would kill their millions in another war between great nations. All the Powers are preparing to use explosives and gases of unprecedented destructive force, to be discharged from airplanes and dirigibles as well as from field guns. General SIBERT tells us that the mustard gas devised by the American chemists, but never used, would have been far more deadly than the German variety, which drove the British out of strongly fortified Armentières in one hour. It cannot be impressed upon civilized peoples too much that a chemists' war would be incalculably more disastrous to the nations engaged in it than the struggle of 1914-18. The American people must ask themselves whether they can afford to disregard the conviction of the thirty-nine countries now forming the League of Nations that it offers the best safeguards against the horrors and waste of modern war.

DEEPENING THE MYSTERY.

The orthodox Republican doctrine of the League of Nations becomes daily more like a Rosicrucian mystery. It smacks of a secret cult in which there are inner circles. Every now and then some high priest of the sect emerges to explain the esoteric truth, but only succeeds in wrapping the subject in fresh darkness. Some college professors asked Senator HARDING to clear the matter up for them, but his letter to President SCHURMAN must leave them wondering whether straight thinking and plain speaking have perished from the political earth. The letter is one long obfuscation. It is against the League, yet for "all that is good and useful" in it. It opposes "going into" the League, yet favors going into an "association" of nations for doing the very things which the League proposes to do. It would "perfect the Hague Tribunal" and strive for a "world court," ignoring the fact that the latter has just been created under the League. Yet if this country were to insist upon that "plan" it would be "recreant." So it goes, in and out and round about. No one can say precisely what Senator HARDING means and intends. Perhaps the exegesis of the true Republican faith about the League is beyond his best and most honest endeavors.

This uncertainty does not prevent Republicans from giving strong support to each varying view of the League as it is magisterially handed down at Marion. They are rapidly getting into the position of the old Scotchwoman who was taunted with not really knowing what the Solemn League and Covenant was. "Maybe so," she admitted, "but I'll mainteen it." Meanwhile, with so many carried about by every wind of doctrine, it is a comfort to know that there is one infallible authority. The Sun stands like another ATHANASIUS "contra mundum." Conscious that it is the guardian of the lack of faith once delivered to the saints, it proceeds to judgment against ELIHU ROOT, and excommunicates him from the true Republican church. But it must be confessed that this only deepens the mystery.

IGNORING THE CRANK LETTER.

Letters of warning were received in the Wall Street district and were ignored as those of a man mentally unbalanced—until after the explosion. This is characteristic of the public attitude toward "crank" letters. Public officials and prominent men receive dozens of such communications—warnings, abuse, threats—and make it a point of pride to tear them up. Yet the fact is notorious that when a crime of desperate violence is run to earth, from sending an infernal machine by parcel post to shooting a President, men of the type despised as cranks are often found to have been connected with it.

The individual citizen, doubtless, has no personal responsibility in such a case. To refuse to be concerned with warnings or threats is the part of wisdom and self-respect. Probably nine out of ten letters, perhaps ninety-nine out of a hundred, are vain and futile ravings which mean nothing except that the writer has got something out of his system. But the public has a serious concern. The tenth man—or the hundredth—may cost it a loss ranging from property damage to the martyrdom of a President. In brief, the crank letter should be at once put in the hands of the police, its writer ferreted out and sent to jail or to the alienist.

A recent number of Mental Hygiene, summarizing the records of the army Medical Corps during the war, shows that mental deficiency is approximately three times more frequent than insanity, three times more frequent than drug inebriety, which has lately become an object of systematic care, and actually twenty times more frequent than disabling alcoholism. In a large proportion of cases the deficiency is merely "quantitative," resulting in shiftlessness, stupidity, imbecility. In many instances, however, it shows itself in "anti-social behavior"—truancy, pilfering, sex offenses, assault and the like. No means of distinguishing the more serious forms is more immediate and effective than collecting crank letters—and their senders.

The two letters received in Wall Street were apparently from the same man. He is described by those who know him as a man of good family, intellectual power and integrity who became mentally deranged as the result of a nervous breakdown. Yet he is reported to have associated with Communists, he predicted the explosion within a few hours and warned acquaintances. The police are now in possession of the documents—and their sender. If they could have begun work on the case before the explosion, they would have stood a far better chance of securing evidence against the principals in the plot.

ILLINOIS REPUBLICANS.

Apparently we shan't know until the official count of votes whether Governor LOWDEN'S or Mayor THOMPSON'S candidates for Governor and Senator have won in the Republican primaries. In Mr. THOMPSON'S capital and seat of power he seems to have "swept everything." Mighty before, he is to be the absolute master of Cook County hereafter. Its primary elections were illuminated by that gracious light of assault and homicide that gilds the energetic processes of the faithful and recalls a period of politics which once wicked New York City has long outgrown.

The City Council, full of a doubtless unworthy suspicion, is planning to deprive the Mayor of his control of the Police Department in the matter of election returns. He and his henchmen are shrieking "Fraud!" wherever returns from outside the Thompson Pale are disappointing. Cool practice of the science of addition in Chicago may be difficult for them.

The Chicago Republicans, the Republicans of the rest of Illinois, know Mr. THOMPSON much more intimately and from closer and long detailed experience than outlanders can; and outlanders know quite enough about him, his methods and his following. His hold on Chicago has been reaffirmed and strengthened. There the Big Boss is bigger than ever, and he has almost succeeded, if he has not succeeded, in making himself the boss of the Republican Party of the State.

That the Republican voters of the State should be divided so evenly between Governor LOWDEN, whose administration has been a model of integrity, effectiveness, economy, and Mayor THOMPSON, with his singular record as an American and as Mayor, is unintelligible or only too intelligible. In either case it is most regrettable.

TWO WAYS OF CELEBRATING.

In connection with the approaching six hundredth anniversary of the death of DANTE, two rival proposals are before the Italian Parliament. One calls for the usual forms of celebration, great meetings, orations, historical commemorations, illuminations, &c. And an appropriation of 2,000,000 lire is asked. But the Minister of Education, BENEDETTO CROCE, himself a poet and critic, opposes the plan. He objects, first, to the outlay involved, declaring that in these hard times and strenuous days for Italy a simpler way of honoring DANTE'S memory should be devised. And what CROCE urges is that the Italian people be exhorted to read and re-read the works of their great national poet. This seems to many in Italy so startling or unworthy a scheme that they are reported to be "indignant" at the suggestion of the Minister of Education. An outsider may wonder how much DANTE is actually read by the Italians today. They might at least ponder some of his sayings about their country. Just at present they might well quote his line, "Di quell' umile Italia fia salute," and look about anxiously for the man who is to lead Italy safely out of her existing troubles.

PARISIAN RATS.

Somewhat imaginative, one fancies, is the census by guess and estimate of the Parisian rats, which puts their number at 8,000,000. Myopolis can't be so much larger than Lutetia. Rats of Paris must love to mystify. Chaffing CLEMENT VAUTEL invents a telegram from an American girl who informs a hotel keeper that she won't take the apartment reserved for her. Paris is so plagued with rats that she has given up her proposed visit. Mr. VAUTEL gravely enlarges on his text and tells of a rat that rode D. H. on the footboard of a taxicab. In short, allons donc; which is to say in American, "Rats!"

Paris is herself again. The other day some wags were haled to the police station for unsportsmanlike and unlawful conduct. They were shooting rats with revolvers. There is a bounty of 5 cents for each rat killed, and the corpus delicti must be produced as a guarantee of good faith. An ingenious collector appeared at a police station with a lot of tails. The disappearance of the bodies he accounted for by saying that he was the inventor of a gifted "capsule" which blew the rats into smithereens, but thoughtfully left their tails intact. He played the game successfully four days. On the fifth a policeman and Nemesis waylaid him. A domiciliary visit found that he had on hand 2,000 rat-tails fashioned of string and rubber.

One touch of Nature! Many an American bounty-hunter has practiced shrewd expedients. Some of the Massachusetts folks had gypsy moth preserves, and even virtuous Kansans have been accused of raising wolves for the bounty.

Turning from rats as game to rats of speech, the French say, "He has rats in his head," just as we say, "He has rats in his garret." A French "rat" may be a thief by night, a chorus girl, a term of endearment—"My little rat," and so on; and our "pigs in clover" are French "rats in straw." "He fears naught but the butter woman and the rats" is a polite synonym for a writer whose pages are only fit to do up butter in or to make a meal for the present scourges of Paris. In English, by the way, when was "scab" substituted for "rat" in the sense of a non-unionist?

In justice to ratdom, ill-famed as a carrier of disease, it should be remembered that it was after experiments on patriarch rats, 28 or 30 months old, that Professor STEINACH of Vienna and his disciples proceeded to rejuvenate elderly humans.

THE COMPLETE ARTIST.

Each day in Fiume sees a new demonstration of the passing of art into action. When D'ANNUNZIO was younger he used to bring flowers to the ladies at daybreak; but now that age has mellowed his judgment he wastes no bouquets on others. He saves them for himself. He goes forth every morning and plucks another sprig of laurel for his own brow.

When the lately promulgated Constitution of the Italian Regency of Quarnero, written in holograph by the bard himself, was found to contain a provision that "in times of extreme national danger" the Executive Committee of seven rectors could be superseded by a "Commander" modeled on the old Roman dictators, it required no clairvoyant to predict that the present would be regarded as such a time and that D'ANNUNZIO would be the Commander. But it was not foreseen that he would be not only the Commander, but the Minister of Foreign Affairs and Minister of Defense. Before long he will probably hold all seven rectorships as well.

One thinks of Pooh-Bah, but Pooh-Bah allowed another to hold at least one public office, and that the somewhat important one of Lord High Executioner. A better parallel, perhaps, is the gentleman who by a process of absorption became a cook and a captain bold, and the mate of the Nancy brig, and a bosun tight, and a midshipmite, and the crew of the captain's gig. And now Fiume is dead, commercially; the inhabitants still eat, thanks to the Red Cross and sporadic buccaneering, but the latest capture on the high seas turned out to have an inedible cargo, and the Italian Government has not seen fit to pay D'ANNUNZIO the ransom he demands for the ship, though his asking price has gone down from 2,000,000 lire to 30,000. A resident of Fiume, on whom the glory of representing true nobility against the false, vile and cowardly standards of civilization was thrust without his consent, might feel that this privilege costs more than it is worth; but then it is notoriously hard to live with an artist.

For most of the troubles of Fiume are due to the fact that D'ANNUNZIO is an artist. His ideal of art is somewhat exacting. He will leave nothing to the collaboration of assistants, interpreters or audience. The artist must be everything. No doubt most artists are occasionally afflicted with that desire when they see their visions transmuted into something else by inept interpretation, but in practice it is hard to accomplish. The common view is that RICHARD WAGNER, conducting at Baireuth his own operas in his own theatre, produced under his direction and in settings designed by him, came as near realizing this ideal as any man on earth. But D'ANNUNZIO would go further. He would play all the parts and all the instruments.

GEORGES CLEMENCEAU is an artist in leisure hours and a man of action when he is working. As a politician of longer experience, and an artist who takes himself less seriously, he displays greater moderation. To reporters who interviewed him as he set out for India with the fratricidal intention of shooting tigers he sportively suggested that perhaps the Indians would like him well enough to make him Emperor and restore the glories of the Grand Mogul. In that case he promised pleasurable and lucrative offices of state to the reporters, and reserved for himself, in addition to the imperial authority, no other office except that of Chief Inspector of Dancing Girls.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Can Cities Really Be Libeled?

Chicago's remarkable Mayor has distinguished himself again, and, incidentally, he has revealed an originality with which hitherto he has not been credited. He has done both by causing to be brought against each of two Chicago papers suits for $10,000,000, the demand for damages being based on the charge that these papers have libeled, not the Mayor, but the city! This is an action which has had few precedents, if any, and its outcome will be awaited with interest.

Libel, by all common knowledge and custom, has persons for victims, not corporations, and the contention that either a newspaper or an individual cannot say anything it or he pleases about a town, large or small, is either unsound or whole multitudes of writers and speakers from time immemorial frequently are taking terrible chances of fine or imprisonment or both.

Of course, depreciation or denunciation of a town by an outsider has always been something that was a little safer out of the town than in it, but the dangers revealed by experience have been from action more summary than that of courts, taken by excitable residents who felt themselves aggrieved or insulted by adverse criticism. That feeling is logical, as the residents of a town are responsible for whatever faults it has, and naturally they feel an equal rage whether the faults alleged are real or imaginary. In the one case the anger is what the new psychologists call a "defensive mechanism," in the other it is commonly described as "righteous."

Comments contemptuous or derisive, therefore, are more safely directed at towns from a considerable distance—that between Chicago and St. Louis, for instance; but there has been supposed to be no great risk when they were as near as New York and Philadelphia, or—in other days—New York and Brooklyn.

Such Suits Involve Large Risks.

For a newspaper intentionally and maliciously to attack the credit or repute of the city where it is published would be an almost unimaginable folly. Motives for such a course entirely lack, while those for not doing it are many and so obvious that to mention them is unnecessary. To disinterested observers, therefore, it seems something more than probable that Mayor THOMPSON will have—well, difficulty in proving that the articles of which he complains did more than call attention to what the writers of them thought were real municipal evils, and hoped, through disclosure and explanation, to remedy.

Another large possibility is that the defendants will be able to prove not only the existence of the evils they have mentioned, but also that the Mayor and his policies are connected, not remotely, with the creating or perpetuation of the objectionable conditions. That is a contingency of which his legal advisers should have warned him, and if they did not warn him they were strangely remiss.

According to the Mayor, the city's credit has been impaired and its expenditures for supplies have been increased by unfounded assertions of its near approach to insolvency. That real injury could be inflicted on a city in that way is undeniable, and not quite unimaginable is it that in political animosity to the local administration or its head a newspaper might exaggerate or misrepresent the city's financial troubles; but such misbehavior, though serious, it has not been the custom to call libelous, and this is a late day for Chicago to be suing its critics, domestic or foreign.

No Telepathy Came Into Action.

With a seeming shrewdness that lays a promising defense of insanity in case such a defense should be needed, the man FISCHER explains his prophecies of a great explosion in Wall Street by saying that the knowledge on which they were based came to him "out of the air." Absurd as it is, this explanation is not only accepted as plausible by FISCHER'S brother-in-law, whose sanity is unquestioned, but, if the circumstances were different and no crime had been involved, it would get solemn consideration from all of the numerous people who solemnly say of what they call "mental telepathy" that "there is something in it."

As a matter of fact there is nothing at all "mystical" in FISCHER'S somewhat inexact forecast of the Wall Street disaster. There is, on the one hand, the possibility—apparently a very remote one—that he really did know what was planned, either as himself one of the plotters or from a chance overhearing of something one of them said to another. For this theory in neither of its phases is there any present support.

Probable almost to certainty is it that merely by chance did FISCHER fix on Wednesday or Thursday afternoon as the time for the blow at bankers and capitalists of which he had been dreaming and talking for months. His imaginings led him inevitably at last to select a day and hour for the avenging of the imaginary grievances which he, like every other sufferer from his familiar form of dementia, was cherishing.

That he happened nearly to hit the mark is no more remarkable, really, than are a dozen "coincidences" that pass unnoticed in the experience of everybody, every day. That one catches the subway train he does, instead of the one before or after it; that one meets the friend from the home town at a certain corner, instead of somewhere else; that a shoestring breaks exactly as the clock strikes 8, instead of a minute earlier or later—these and innumerable other occurrences are commonplace only because they are both familiar and unimportant.

Texas and Ireland.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The old Greeks believed that the High Gods were occasionally much amused with the performances of mortals. One of the things that must excite their risibilities is the recent performance of the Texas Senate in extending its sympathy to Ireland and wishing for "freedom" for that country.

Now the truth is that Ireland has far more liberal representation in the British Parliament than Texas has in the two houses of Congress in Washington; and the only reason why Ireland has not long since had a local Parliament such as Texas has is because there are one million Protestants in Ireland who refuse to submit themselves to the control of three and one-half million Catholics.

In the year 1800 the Irish Parliament passed an act uniting the island with England, Scotland and Wales, and this was confirmed by the British Parliament in the following year and has lasted 120 years.

From the time Texas obtained her independence, in 1836, till 1845 it was an independent republic. In 1845 the Congress of Texas passed a resolution asking to be united with the United States of America, and this was made a law by act of Congress in 1846.

This union continued until 1861, when Texas withdrew therefrom. But the people of the northern part of the United States were just as much opposed to the secession of Texas as the people of England are opposed to the secession of Ireland; and after four years of bloody war Texas was persuaded to come back into the Union, and Texas is as loyal thereto now as any portion of it.

But if twenty or thirty thousand of the people of Texas should arm themselves, should burn Federal buildings and assassinate Federal officers, just as the people of the southern part of Ireland are doing with the British buildings and officers, I am inclined to think that the performance would be stopped with such overwhelming force and so little delay that it would hardly have time to get started. "HARDING NUGGETS."

A Complaint That They Misrepresent Candidate's Views.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If the text of the League covenant, as your editorial states, was omitted from the Republican Text Book, where full reference is made to speeches and articles favoring the League (see pp. 122-3), the covenant itself has been published by the Republican National Committee in Speakers' Series No. 14.

Fault of a more serious nature may be found with the Democratic Text Book.

On Page 2, under the heading "Harding Nuggets," are extracts from his speeches. The first is as follows:

"Dollar wheat makes it a very profitable business."

This statement is considered so damning to Senator Harding that it is repeated on pp. 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421 and 422. The intention is evident of showing Senator Harding as an enemy of the farmers. To any fair-minded man the honesty of this intention can be judged by referring to what Senator Harding actually said in his speech in the Senate of July 17, 1917, from which this sentence has been taken.

After remarking that Ohio is both an agricultural and an industrial State, he says:

"I have followed the cradle, Senators, with the rake, when wheat sold for 40 cents a bushel. That was in the day when farming was something of a contest for subsistence. In this latter day farming has become an occupation for profit; and I happen to know that under normal conditions (the italics are mine) dollar wheat makes it a very profitable occupation—perhaps not to the farmer who farms the farmers, but it is to the farmer who farms a farm."

Senator Harding was not in sympathy with the Government's attempt to regulate prices, but, as he says a little later in the same speech, "I accept it as a matter of necessity in the time of war."

In other words, a patriotic speech by Senator Harding is distorted and travestied by taking out of it one single sentence which is quoted in a sense opposite to the one intended.

The next instance in the Democratic Text Book is even more glaring. The second "Harding Nugget" quoted is:

"Much of the sentiment uttered concerning our part in the war is balderdash."

What is the inference? Was Senator Harding really guilty of a lack of patriotism?

The speech from which this "nugget" is taken was delivered in the Senate on June 8, 1917. It was a speech which demanded as justification for our entrance into the war not mere vaporing over empty formulas, but "the justifiable ground of defending and preserving American national rights." What Senator Harding properly objected to was the attempt made to sidetrack this issue by asserting that our national objective was the destruction of the Hohenzollerns and the Hapsburgs.

The honesty of the Democratic Text Book quoting a single sentence from Senator Harding's speeches in order to present it in a false and misleading light must be left to the judgment of your readers. LEWIS EINSTEIN.

Suffrage Ratification.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We are often told that women in politics will introduce a higher standard of morals. But if the good women among the suffragists allow unscrupulous leaders to adopt deceitful methods, we fail to see improvement; rather do we perceive degeneration. The quiet influence of good and wise women in the past has been a power for good.

What do we see in Connecticut? The Governor of that State publicly declared that he would not be a party to any proceeding to change the Constitution of that State with regard to local government without a vote of the people of Connecticut. Accordingly he refused to call a special session of the Legislature for the purpose of voting on the suffrage amendment. But the suffragists induced Tennessee legislators to violate their oaths of office and vote for the suffrage amendment at a session at which consideration of that amendment was expressly forbidden. To get this resolution certified they had to resort to methods forbidden by parliamentary law and secure a certificate while the motion to reconsider was pending. Upon this illegal certificate the Secretary of State issued his proclamation. Thereupon the suffragists urged the Governor to call a special session to adopt legislation to carry out an amendment already ratified. They concealed the illegality of the Tennessee ratification. The Governor weakly yielded and called a session for that special purpose. Immediately the Legislature convened, a resolution to ratify was passed against the protest of the Governor. It was thus hoped to make good the defect of the Tennessee ratification. All of which shows what all history teaches, that unscrupulous women are more crafty than men. The good women who yearn to improve politics must bestir themselves or they will find that they are the dupes of leaders more clever and cunning than they.

Behind the Bomb.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You have said it in that first editorial of this morning's issue entitled "The Wall Street Explosion," but you might have added to editors and politicians in that last sentence certain college professors of social science, so called, and other like pink Bolsheviki. These bomb throwers are really not to blame. It is the people higher up who instruct them in their theory.

ROUSE YE!

The blood-red banner flies on high,
Unseen by those who scorn to see—
The poor blind fools who yet must die
Before the madmen's path is free.
Long have they preached—the while we smiled!—
The rule of steel and blood and fire;
Long have their subtle lies beguiled
Our reason from their real desire.

They strike, and strike again, at all
The things we love and cherish best,
But blindly still, whate'er befall,
We, heedless, take our perilled rest.
Yet we have looked upon our dead—
The blameless children, mangled, slain,
Because we slept! Upon whose head
Must vengeance fall—the brand of Cain,
For these white bodies stained in death?
We are to blame as well as those
Who killed! We should have choked the breath—
The poisons that the monster blows
From his foul mouth ere he could curl
His coils around our country's throat:
Could wait in ambush, death to hurl
At innocence—in peace to gloat!
We have been fools to think that truth,
Unhelped, can stop the bullet's course—
That serpents nursed show grateful ruth,
Or love can block red hatred's force.

Rouse ye! Nor let the monster roam
At large through this loved land of ours.
Arm ye! And strike for love, for home.
Against the monster's growing powers.
Smash every lie! Crush each vile thought
Ere it can spread its poison wide.
This, in our faith so dearly bought—
This, in the name of those who died.

LONG SAYS ISSUE IS PROGRESSIVISM

Former Assistant to Colby Holds Harding Would Turn the Nation Backward.

AND COX DRIVE FORWARD

Reactionaries in the Saddle in the Republican Party, He Asserts.

By WILLIAM H. CRAWFORD.

Breckenridge Long, who recently resigned as Assistant Secretary of State to become the Democratic candidate for Senator from Missouri, believes that the cardinal difference between the two great parties is the difference between progressivism and reaction. He outlined for me his opinion of the outstanding differences which are exemplified by their respective candidates.

"There is really only one issue in the campaign," said Mr. Long. "It is attested in various ways, but we return each time to the sharp dividing line. The one issue is whether reactionary policies shall prevail or whether a safely progressive administration shall succeed this; whether the reins of government shall be turned over to those who will turn around and drive the other way, or be intrusted to hands which will guide us along the High Road to the Future; whether policies of government and standards of public conduct long since discarded shall be reinstated in control, or progressive, up-to-date policies of the newer America shall continue us in our pre-eminent place in national and international affairs.

"The candidates of the two great parties well exemplify the difference between the parties. Mr. Harding is reactionary, looks 'backward for inspiration,' idealizes the days of McKinley and Mark Hanna, proposes to substitute the practices of those days for those which have since evolved. That his expressed ideas are not adjusted to this campaign for purposes of political expediency and that he is running true to form is well attested by a review of his editorial comment during the campaign of 1912. The anathemas he heaped upon Theodore Roosevelt indicated his failure to comprehend that Roosevelt was striving for a change, working for an improvement over the methods of the Old Guard, trying to bring popular government to a higher expression.

"Mr. Harding could not understand that philosophy and could see in its expression only a political treachery. He drew analogy between Theodore Roosevelt and Benedict Arnold, failing to differentiate between conduct treacherous to one's country and a super-patriotism which tried to reinstate political freedom in his country. Mr. Harding then thought it worthy only of condemnation to free a great political party from control of the bosses, and now affirms his belief by accepting the nomination from the hands of those bosses, and proposing to readjust the affairs of the country, so that the bosses will again control our destinies, and so the beacon light Mark Hanna held aloft, and under the reflected glow of which he had his political training, will again light our backward steps.

Says Cox Looks to the Future.

"On the other hand, Governor Cox looks to the future; sees the things we must meet if we continue to progress; forms opinions in regard to policies; expresses them with an unusual clarity and decision, and manifests that manner of mind which characterizes constructive statesmanship. He is progressive; he is proceeding along the high road to the future; he is outlining domestic and international policies which America must follow; he is acting freely and in the open, without suspicion of any clandestine control.

"That is the difference between the two men and between the parties they respectively represent. On the 4th of March next we will set up housekeeping. The Republican party proposes to throw out all the present furniture and put back the old pieces from the garret which Mark Hanna used and supplement that with odd junk from the second-hand store. The Democratic Party proposes to use all that is good of what we have and to continue the establishment in good order by installing sound pieces of up-to-date furniture.

"The fundamental issue in the campaign and the difference between the parties is manifested in each of the particular matters which have been projected upon the screen.

"The League of Nations is the most important of these. The Democratic Party approves it, indorses the plan, advocates gradual disarmament, encourages a movement to prevent war, plans that America shall properly exercise the influence which is rightfully hers, and agrees to co-operation with other Governments to preserve the peace of the world.

"Isolation" No Longer a Fact.

"We recognize that the traditional 'isolation' the Republicans harp upon long since ceased to be a fact. 'Isolation' is no longer a question of Government policy. It has been banished from the world by the advancement of science and by the inventive genius of man. The marvelous influences of electricity and the impelling powers of steam and gas have inextricably involved us with other peoples; our merchants and bankers are in direct contact with those of other lands; our manufacturers are dependent upon sales in other countries (to continue their maximum proceeding our farmers rely upon the consumption of foreign peoples to exchange for the produce of other climes).

"The development of mechanical science which has made possible this highly specialized economic condition has brought it about through the multiplication of means of communication. The more avenues of communication, the more communication there is. The railroad, the steamship, the telegraph, the telephone, the motor car and the hard surface road, each have opened up a field for communicating with other people, and through each of these fields there have been laid myriads of paths along each of which flow the friendship and the commerce of every one. The world is bound around with bands of steel and strands of copper, and each succeeding one of these does its part to reduce space as a factor in our lives and to eliminate time. 'Isolation' is no more.

"What the future holds no one can say, but it is safe to assume that, acting under the stimulation of highly developed and competitive industry, new discoveries will be made which will improve the present methods of communication and find entire new fields, so that peoples will be more closely connected and nations brought more closely in contact and our relations with other nations made even more intimate.

"War stops up all these normal avenues, stimulates artificial routes, and creates abnormal occupations. It is ruinous to business and to morals. We propose to eliminate it and its causes, so far as humanly possible, by substituting constructive international cooperation for destructive international rivalry and jealous national alignments.

"The Republican politicians in control of the organization, policies and destinies of their party oppose the League of Nations. Mr. Harding, speaking for them, openly states a position of opposition to it. He is opposed to joining the League. He sets up some thinly sketched suggestion of a World Court, taking his retrospective inspiration from The Hague Tribunal, which played no part in 1914, when the World War commenced. His idea is the old tried-and-found-wanting idea. It is natural for him to have it. He makes no mention of eliminating causes of war or of decreasing armament. He does not mention secret treaties. He applies no brake to the impetuous flight into war under national excitement. He fails to comprehend the underlying causes of war. He has no thought but of a court to settle the bill for damages after the destruction is done. We have that now.

"Mr. Harding's attitude has not changed. He practiced in the Senate what he now preaches, but he was so reticent in the Senate debates and absent so many times when questions were voted upon that his real antagonism was not so apparent. But his attitude has not changed. He was one of the Republican destroyer fleet in the Senate who used their torpedoes from behind the smoke screen of Lodge and at the command of Penrose; Penrose, Lodge, Borah, Johnson, Brandegee, Moses, and Harding—trailing, always trailing.

"Another manifestation of the issue in the campaign and of the basic difference in principle between the two parties—the difference between reaction and progress—is Mr. Harding's attitude on peace with Germany. He has uttered a thought which last year would have landed in an internment camp the man who spoke it. He advocates peace by resolution, its natural sequence being a separate peace with Germany.

"Those members of the Republican Party who have been proud of their affiliations in the past must blush with shame. Those members of that party who are without the pale of boss control must regret the policies to which that party is being committed. The suggestion of a separate peace, the proposal of a course so dishonorable, is easy enough for the Republican nominee, but he leaves to the imagination the paths we should have to follow. What if Germany and America should not agree upon the terms of such a peace? Does Mr. Harding propose that we should use force to secure the terms we would demand? Or would he sit supinely on his porch and accept the terms Germany would dictate to him?

"The former means war, the latter surrender. Which of these two methods does Mr. Harding propose to follow in order to arrive at that blissful state he epitomizes in 'peace by resolution'? He might be more explicit than he has been and fill in a little more fully the light sketch he has made.

"'World Court' and 'peace by resolution' each has a sonorous and wholesome reverberation, but an analysis of the one shows that the causes which lead to war are entirely ignored, and of the other shows peace by such a route to be either a myth or a delusion.

Tariff as an Issue.

"The tariff is another point of difference. Mr. Harding has seen fit to pull it out from its quiet but useful nook and attempt to reinject it into politics. The Democrats took it out of politics and placed it on a scientific basis, where it properly belongs. Mr. Harding looks backward to the high tariff program of Mark Hanna. With prices already too high, a general increase in tariff rates would only cause prices to rise still higher. Under the present proper arrangement 'tariff' schedules are susceptible of technical treatment so that the rates will yield the greatest revenue to the Government and yet cause the least hardship to the people.

"And so it is with question after question. The Democratic Party, under the aggressive leadership and progressive statesmanship of Governor Cox, is upholding the modern policies of this modern America, while the Republicans, under the sluggish direction and reactionary program of Mr. Harding, are planning a régime in America which is full of many possibilities for evil.

"The men in control of the Republican Party today are extremists. As reactionaries they are just as radical as the men on the other extreme who resort to force to impose their will. They are each the exponents of political extremes, each will resort to any expedient to achieve their objective.

"If, by any unfortunate circumstance, these particular Republicans should be placed in control of our Government there would be a reflex action and the other extreme would also come into power. Many a proper-minded and right-thinking man would draw repulsively from the execution of the reactionary policies the Republicans now outline. There would automatically be a drift toward the other extreme—the I. W. W.'s, the Bolsheviats, the Non-Partisan Leagues, the extreme Socialists. All of the firebrands and aggressive radicals would be thrown together, their numbers would be augmented, their ranks would be co-ordinated, and we should begin our journey through the midst of strife. One set of extremists by their actions would naturally increase the strength of the other extreme, and sooner or later we should have trouble in America.

Will Be Settled by the People.

"This must not be. It will not be. The business man will think of it, for it means eventually his business and his bank account. The father and the mother will think of it, for it means the security of their home. The people throughout the whole country, in the quiet repose of the rural district, in the noise and competition of the cities, each will think what it means to choose reaction—extreme reaction—instead of sane progress, and, having thought, their natural instinct will direct them to the proper decision.

"The voice of America will not be heard until Nov. 2 next, but there can be no doubt about the answer to the call which has gone forth.

"America will approve the League of Nations; will reiterate her decision for peace, progress and prosperity; will join with the other nations of the world to secure peace by the exchange of mutual covenants to keep the peace; will declare for gradual

WARNS THAT PLAGUE MENACES AMERICA

Surgeon General Cummings Fears Europe's Epidemics Will Obtain a Foothold Here.

TELLS OF PREVENTIVE STEPS

Urges the Public to Aid the Government Health Service by Reporting Any Cases.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 19.—Surgeon General H. S. Cummings, in charge of the United States Public Health Service, in an interview today said there was considerable danger to America at the present time because of contagious disease rampant in Middle Europe which might be brought here through the emigration of peasants and other refugees who have been exposed to these maladies.

General Cummings has had a notable career during the past three years. In 1917 he was adviser in sanitation to the Navy Department. In the following year he was sent to Europe to look after the sanitation of troops and ports. "His trip led him, among other places, to southern Russia, where he spent many weeks, acting as sanitary adviser. He then represented this Government at the International Sanitary Convention of Rome and also helped to draft the sanitary clauses of the League of Nations covenant which he says has since been adopted.

"Seven million people are trying to get here from that part of Europe which is at present a hotbed of typhus and yellow fever," said General Cummings. "The United States therefore is in considerable danger. The large majority of these would-be emigrants are trying to come from Asia Minor and the Black Sea district of Russia through the ports of Danzig, Bremen and Rotterdam. We are therefore trying to reconcentrate them in Greek and Italian ports for transportation to the United States. In addition to typhus, bubonic plague is present in all Mediterranean ports. Several outbreaks have occurred and recently I hear there have been twenty cases in Paris, which means that the disease evidently reached Havre or other ports, and so the cases found their way to the capital.

"This is outrageous, for while one can well understand that with the unsanitary conditions prevailing in uncivilized or dirtier southern localities these diseases are frequent, in the north they are almost unheard of.

"To lessen the dangers this country is subjected to from these sources the United States Public Health Service has medical officers stationed at Danzig and at Dutch and Belgian ports, as well as at the more important Greek ports, to inspect all vessels and see that proper precautions are taken in the case of the emigrants. For many years we have had this service in operation in Italian ports. Recently, however, and without any formal notice, the Rome Government has raised objections to United States medical officers being stationed in Italian ports, basing its position upon an old treaty which was dug up from goodness knows where. We can therefore do nothing except prevent vessels from infected ports entering United States waters. I believe this measure will cause Italy to change her unreasonable attitude.

"In Mexico both plague and yellow fever are rampant as well as in Guatemala and Salvador. We are taking precautions there and have agents aboard American steamships plying to those places.

"In the United States we are represented at all quarantine stations and our agents are boarding incoming foreign vessels in order to fumigate them and destroy every rat aboard. This is the only way to keep the bubonic plague out of America.

"It is high time that the people and Government awoke to a realization of the fact that Europe's plagues will obtain a foothold here ere many months go by unless we keep close watch upon all immigrants that arrived. Ignorance will not excuse anybody in this country. I cannot emphasize too strongly that the Public Health Service wishes the people themselves would aid us with full information of any suspicious cases occurring, so that prompt assistance can be rendered and precautions taken."

Destroyers and Air Fleet Meet Them Off Shore—Great Popular Greeting at Rio.

RIO JANEIRO, Sept. 19 (Associated Press).—King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, the first King and Queen to visit any South American country, received a tremendous ovation when they landed on Brazilian soil this afternoon. The city was in holiday array, virtually the entire population greeting the royal party.

President and Mrs. Pessoa, the Foreign Minister, Azevedo Marques; the Minister of Marine, Paul Soares De Moura; the Belgian Minister and other officials boarded the Sao Paulo immediately on her arrival and welcomed the royal visitors to Brazil. The party then embarked for shore and greetings were exchanged between the King and Queen and the civil authorities and high officers of the army and navy.

OFFER PLAN FOR DEAL WITH GERMAN LLOYD

PROVIDES JOINT OPERATION

If Approved, Freight and Passenger Service Will Be Opened Between Bremen and American Ports.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The United States Mail Steamship Company of New York, of which Judge Mayer is the head, and the North German Lloyd steamship interests have submitted to the United States Shipping Board for consideration and approval a contract providing for joint operation of the vessels of both lines in passenger and freight service between Germany and the American Atlantic port.

Admiral Benson, Chairman of the Shipping Board, stated tonight that he had caused the agreement to be referred to the legal department of the Shipping Board for consideration. No action will be taken on the agreement by the board until after the legal department makes its report.

It is understood that in many respects the agreement is similar to one recently negotiated between the Hamburg-American Interests and the American Ship and Commerce Corporation. It is understood that under the agreement, which has been in negotiation for six months, provided it is approved by the Shipping Board, freight and passenger service under a joint arrangement between the American and German companies, will be established between Bremen and New York, Baltimore and Boston.

DR. I. C. STURGES RETIRES.

Reviews His 23 Years at St. Cornelius Church in Farewell Sermon.

The Rev. Dr. Isaac C. Sturges, for twenty-three years rector of the Episcopal Church of St. Cornelius, on West Forty-sixth Street, between Ninth and Tenth Avenues, preached his farewell sermon yesterday morning to an overflow congregation. Dr. Sturges, who is more than 70 years old, has labored in the same neighborhood for forty-four years, the additional time as a member of the staff of what is now the Church of Zion and St. Timothy. This evening representatives of the Orange Lodges will give a farewell reception to Dr. Sturges in the Sunday school hall of the church building.

Dr. Sturges preached a reminiscent sermon. He stated that he had married 1,155 couples, had officiated at 1,408 funerals and had baptized 1,845 persons. He retires to make the way clear for a merger of his church with St. Clement's Episcopal Church, and will live on his farm at Wilton, Conn.

The Rev. Thomas A. Sparks, rector of St. Clement's Church, at 136 West Third Street, will be rector of the consolidated church. Although the building of St. Cornelius will be continued, the name will be St. Clement's.

ABBOT PATRICK ADVANCED.

Pastor of Russian Church of Transfiguration Made Archimandrite.

The Right Rev. Abbot Patrick, pastor of the Russian Church of the Transfiguration, at 233 East Seventeenth Street, where services are conducted altogether in English, was yesterday elevated to the office of Archimandrite. He is the first American to be advanced to this office, which is that of an arch-abbot, and is similar to that of archdeacon in the Episcopal Church.

The ceremony was performed by the Most Rev. Alexander, Archbishop of the Aleutian Isles and North America, and was under the jurisdiction of Tikhon, patriarch of Moscow and all the Russias. Archbishop Alexander bestowed the mitre and pastoral staff upon Abbot Patrick, and gave to the new Archimandrite the custody as prelate-in-charge of all the American work of the Russian Church in this country.

Abbot Patrick, who is 37 years old, before becoming a monk of the Russian Church, lived in Baltimore and Norfolk, Va. His name in the world was James Grattan Mythen. At one time the new Archimandrite was a student in the General Episcopal Theological Seminary of this city.

GUARD SING SING FROM NIGHT ATTACK

Officials Stirred by Warning of Attempt to Plunge Prison Into Darkness.

RUMOR OF PLOT ONLY HOAX

Lighting Engineer's Tale of Masked Bandits Apparently Planning Rescue Was Purely Imaginative.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, Sept. 19.—The imagination of George Benz, night engineer in the Westchester Lighting Company's plant at New Rochelle, caused Sing Sing Prison officials tonight to take extraordinary precautions to prevent a "jail delivery." And the same old imagination had them extremely vigilant during the wee hours of this morning, too.

Benz, who landed on his head in a motor cycle accident several months ago, notified the New Rochelle police at 1 o'clock this morning that six men—armed and masked, of course—had held him up in his boiler room and tried to force him to tell them how to switch Sing Sing into darkness. The prison's own electric current plant is out of order and temporarily the New Rochelle plant is furnishing current. Benz told the police he refused and the gang thereupon headed for Sing Sing in an automobile.

Warden Lawes at the prison was told. Accepting the information of the police, he lost no time in fortifying his criminal wards against a spell of liberty. Tonight he had fifteen guards with Winchesters patrolling outside the walls, and a reinforced guard went into the three watchtowers. And everybody settled down for an attempt at jail delivery.

Just when the outside guards were most aware that the Hudson wields a wicked wind these nights, the New Rochelle police called up the prison and announced that company officials had had a talk with Benz, and that Benz, they said, had merely had one of those "psychic warning" fits, too. And that's all there was to it.

It was recalled here that forty-seven years ago, on a snowy New Year's Eve, the prison took just such precautions against a raid. The report then was that "Red" Leary and a band of outlaws from New York City were riding to raid the prison. That time it developed that a number of hunters bound into Westchester County early to pursue the elusive fox had been cast as "Red" Leary and a band of "outlaws."

CHARGE SWINDLING OF NAVAL RECRUITS

Lieut. S. F. Sullivan Under Surveillance While Accounts Are Being Investigated.

$6,000 SHORTAGE REPORTED

Discovery Made When Change of Time of Payment Was Ordered to Check Desertions.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Upon instructions received from the Navy Department, Lieutenant S. F. Sullivan, in charge of the recruit payroll at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, has been placed under surveillance while Government auditors are investigating his accounts.

The records presented, it was said at the station, an involved task, due to the alleged juggling of hundreds of accounts whereby, it is charged, naval recruits were swindled out of their pay. Six thousand dollars in shortages has already been uncovered, and estimates today of the probable total put the figure at $75,000.

Lieutenant Sullivan, who is attached to the Pay Corps, handled, until a few days ago, the payroll of about 7,900 recruits. He had charge of funds, pay vouchers and receipts.

Until two weeks ago the men were paid monthly. At that time, however, an order was issued providing for two pay days a month. This change was made because a large number of desertions were attributed to the slowness of the pay system.

It was when this change was made that complaints began to pour into the Navy Departments. Several pay receipts were established as forgeries and a check-up of the accounts was ordered.

Lieutenant Sullivan will be tried by the General Court-Martial Board.

GIRL, 18, HELD FOR BIGAMY.

Says First Husband's Companions Wrote He Was Killed in War.

When arraigned in a Brooklyn court yesterday on a charge of bigamy, Lillian Muller, 18 years of age, of 791 Hart Street, Brooklyn, told the Magistrate she had been informed by two of her first husband's companions there "that he had been killed at the Battle of the Marne. The young woman, who carried a five months' old child, pleaded with the Magistrate not to send her to prison. She was held in $1,000 bail for examination today.

She received a number of letters from her first husband, Howell C. Lloyd, she said, and finally he wrote that his company was about to go to the front, and intimated that if she did not hear from him again she would know he had been killed. That was the last letter she received, she declared.

Lloyd said he had no desire to break up her apparently happy life, but the Magistrate held her until today.

Marine Men Urge Examination Only of Crew Recruits.

In view of the shortage of the inspecting staff at Ellis Island, it has been suggested by the steamship companies that time might be saved and utilized in the examination of immigrants by waiving the inspection of the crews who came regularly to New York every four weeks or so. It was pointed out that the big liners like the Olympic and Aquitania, carrying crews exceeding 1,000, had few changes each voyage. Under the present ruling every man from the captain to the cabin boy must have his card stamped by the immigration inspectors on arrival. This takes up half a day. This time could be saved, it is said, by listing the new hands and examining them, instead of the entire crew.

One of the senior officials at Ellis Island said yesterday that the idea was a good one and they would like to carry it out, but could do nothing without the consent of the Labor Department in Washington.

The man who thinks he can't shave with a Safety Razor

The man who excuses his use of an old-fashioned razor on the ground that he has a tender skin and wiry beard, often tells this to a safety razor user who has a much more difficult face to shave

ONE of the most surprising reversals of opinion ever known in the history of shaving has suddenly come about.

In the past four months—since the introduction of the new Gillette razor, the BIG FELLOW—more men have given up the old-fashioned way of shaving for the Gillette habit than in any similar period of time heretofore.

Many of them, men who had always looked upon the safety feature of the Gillette as its only advantage and one that they did not require of a razor.

There was something about the Big Fellow, the Gillette with the longer handle and heavier head, that appealed to them the instant they saw its size and felt its weight and balance.

And the men who used to think they couldn't shave with a safety razor are making the Gillette Big Fellow their particular razor—and the fastest selling razor that has ever been placed on the market.

HARDING NEAR END OF PORCH CAMPAIGN

Senator Will Start Next Sunday on His First Trip to Large Cities.

TOLD OF SUPPORT IN SOUTH

Prediction Made That Three Border States at Least Will Vote for Him.

MESSAGE FROM DYING MAN

Texas Democrat Writes to Nominee, Declaring Against the League.

Special to The New York Times.

MARION, Ohio, Sept. 19.—Entering on the last week of his scheduled front porch campaign, Senator Harding will deliver four speeches in Marion this week. From Saturday until Election Day the Senator's front porch campaign will be supplemented by four trips to large cities of the East and the Middle West.

Senator Harding will address tomorrow 400 Grand Army veterans, stopping in Marion on their way to the G. A. R. annual convention in Indianapolis. On Tuesday delegations from Kentucky and Tennessee will make a pilgrimage to the front porch. Thursday members of the Ohio State Dental Association will be received. The front porch campaign will end on Saturday with an address to 3,000 members of the Harding and Coolidge Traveling Men's League. Senator Harding will leave on Sunday for Baltimore, where he will speak Sept. 27.

The front porch campaign is not a new idea, the Rev. Dr. George M. Rourke of Long Beach, Cal., said in a sermon in the First Presbyterian Church this morning. Diligent search of the New Testament, Dr. Rourke said, would show that the front porch campaign originated with the Apostle Paul, who spent two years in Rome in a sort of front porch campaign, receiving pilgrimages and writing letters to those who were unable to go to Rome. Senator and Mrs. Harding were not present at the services.

Promises Support in South.

Wade H. Ellis, former Assistant United States Attorney General and now in charge of the Southern Bureau of Republican Headquarters, told Senator Harding that he would receive "an unprecedented popular vote" in the Southern States. While Mr. Ellis admitted that the South was still overwhelmingly Democratic, he predicted the Republicans would make inroads there this year.

Republican surveys, Mr. Ellis said, indicated that Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri would cast their electoral votes for Harding, while Republican chances in Tennessee and Oklahoma were "hopeful."

"The next North Carolina Legislature," Mr. Ellis asserted, "will be Republican and will redistrict the State honestly, wiping out the shoestring districts."

Two Republican Representatives would be elected from Virginia, two from the cotton mill districts of Georgia, two from North Carolina and one from Alabama, Mr. Ellis predicted.

A deathbed message to Senator Harding from Chester H. Terrell, former Speaker of the Texas House of Representatives, and a Democrat, was made public today by his friend, F. E. Scobey, a resident of San Antonio and a close personal friend of Senator Harding. Mr. Terrell was leader of the group that brought about the impeachment of Governor Ferguson of that State. A few days before he died Mr. Terrell wrote a letter of 4,000 words to Senator Harding, encouraging him in his stand on the League of Nations. The Senator was deeply impressed and sent Mr. Terrell a telegram of appreciation. Mr. Scobey received the following wire from Mr. Terrell's brother:

"Chester has died, having been unconscious for three days. We appreciate wire from Senator Harding. You may publish facts, if you desire."

Would Not Accept League.

In his letter to Senator Harding Mr. Terrell said:

"I have been a Democrat all my life. When I was 24 years old I was elected to the Legislature of this State, and served that term and the next two succeeding, and the last one I was elected Speaker by the largest vote ever given a candidate for that position where there was an actual contest.

"I had never contemplated changing parties until I found that my own party had committed itself to a League of Nations which contains such a provision as Article X.

"It is entirely beyond my conception that any American could agree that Great Britain should have six votes to America's one before the Assembly of the League of Nations, before the labor condition provided for under the League of Nations, and might have as many as three votes to one before the Council.

"The suggestions made for us to adopt an interpretative resolution which would have no binding effect is an absolute absurdity.

"An objection to President Wilson's statement that the Council or Assembly can always block every question, and that we can protect ourselves thereby, is that our representative would not have a right to vote if we were a party to the controversy.

"Therefore, you have a question in which the United States is vitally interested decided by a council of foreign diplomats, probably in secret conference and not in open hearings, and we could only protest their decision by filing a resignation to take effect two years later.

Urged Upon Decisions.

"Even the League to Enforce Peace was going to have the questions decided in an open, judicial way, with representatives to decide the questions as they arose, and not under this plan that would mean deciding questions arising from year to year by men not selected for their fitness to pass upon the questions, but simply selected for some political reason.

"Governor Cox is out for the treaty unamended. Its adoption unamended by the Senate within the next four years is known to every student of the political situation to be an impossibility. It is necessary to begin the consideration of a new scheme entirely, unless the Lodge amendments or something similar to them should be adopted."

Governor R. Livingston Beeckman of Rhode Island and Mrs. Beeckman, after a day as guests at the Harding home, returned East today.

"I have been surprised everywhere at the deep and real enthusiasm for Senator Harding and the Republican Party," said Governor Beeckman. "It is found in all classes, East and West alike. One hears only good words and praise of his statesmanlike conduct of the campaign. His speeches, going right to the point of whatever subject he discusses, have made a great impression. On the other side it is equally true that one finds universal disapproval of the campaign of villification and false statements that the Democratic nominee has been making."

Visited by Grand Army Veterans.

MARION, Ohio, Sept. 19 (Associated Press).—Senator Harding received a front porch delegation today. But no speech was made and there were no flags, banners or bands.

The delegation included a hundred members of the Grand Army of the Republic from Akron, Ohio, who are en route to Indianapolis to attend the national encampment. They were headed by Emmett F. Taggart, Past Grand Commander for Ohio. The Senator and Mrs. Harding shook hands with each.

Several persons conferred with Senator Harding last night and today. Among them were Howard E. Greene of Chicago, secretary of the National Sheep and Wool Bureau; Major Henry S. Hooker of New York, Governor Beeckman of Rhode Island, and Wade H. Ellis, manager of the Washington headquarters.

With Mr. Greene the Senator discussed pending legislation that would require the branding of shoddies so that the buyer would know their real character. The measure was introduced by Senator Capper of Kansas and Representative French of Idaho.

"We merely want," Mr. Greene said, "legislation that will insure that the buyer of fabrics will know exactly what he is getting and not pay for something better than is really being furnished."

WOMEN LOOK TO MARYLAND.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The Maryland Legislature, which convenes in special session tomorrow, is being looked to by leaders of the National Woman's Party to ratify the suffrage amendment. They are counting upon Maryland to become the thirty-eighth State. Officers of the Woman's Party are doing everything possible to secure immediate action and move one more State, as they expresse it, "from the anti to the victory column."

"Replies received from members of the Legislature in answer to queries sent out by the legislative department of the Woman's Party show many men who formerly voted against the amendment are now ready to support it," the militants of the Woman's Party declared in a statement tonight. "Maryland previously acted on the amendment, Feb. 17, and defeated ratification by a vote of 18 to 9 in the Senate and 64 to 36 in the House. If Maryland ratifies there will then be seven States which defeated the amendment—Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Virginia, Delaware and Louisiana, and two States which have not acted—Vermont and Florida."

The Tennessee anti-suffrage delegation, headed by Speaker Seth Walker, will arrive in Washington early tomorrow morning and in the course of the day will call on Secretary of State Colby and ask that the final action of the Legislature in refusing to ratify be received and announced by the Department of State. The Tennessee delegation will be met tomorrow by delegations of "antis" from other States, headed by Miss Mary G. Kilbreth of New York, President of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

WOULD BAR ALL ASIATICS.

Republican Senatorial Candidate in California Also Opposes League.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 19.—"I do not wish to see this nation commit suicide," said Samuel Shortridge, Republican candidate for United States Senator. "I am a nationalist and not an internationalist, and I am, have been and always will be firmly against the League of Nations. It is not because I am afraid to fight. Personally I should be the first to fight for America and the last to surrender her independence. From the beginning of time the Monroe Doctrine has been enough for me, and I am still willing to let it lead me wheresoever I may go.

"Furthermore, I am a protective tariff man, a protectionist first, last and always. I wish my country to be industrially and commercially independent. If we entangle ourselves in foreign alliances we are subjecting this country to a national suicide. No real American wishes to commit this outrage, and we all would be willing to fight if civilization were again at stake.

"I am a firm believer in Senator—or should I say President?—Harding's statement in regard to the Pacific Coast. The Golden Gate must not swing open to admit the refuse of Oriental countries. The thought of it appals the calmest mind and disturbs the stoutest heart. Twenty years ago the Oriental question, as represented by the Chinese, was acute. As then, so since and now, I am opposed to Asiatic immigration to California. And by this I mean the Hindus, Chinese and Japanese."

SEES DRIFT FROM COX.

Waldo Reports Democrats Shifting to Harding.

Rhinelander Waldo, President of the Harding Democratic League, announced yesterday that many Democrats prominent in Tammany Hall were deserting Governor James M. Cox, the Democratic nominee for President, and declaring for Senator Warren G. Harding. Among prominent Tammany men and Democrats who have come out for the Republican nominee for President, Mr. Waldo mentioned Michael J. Horan, attorney, 68 Broadway; Samuel Baum, silk merchant, 225 Fifth Avenue, and President of the Petrofy Jewish Society; Gerald Hull Gray, architect, 16 East Forty-seventh Street; Morton W. Smith, automobile manufacturer, 19 West Forty-fourth Street; Walter F. Hobbs, Vice President of the Flying Model Airplane Corporation, New Haven, Conn.; Dr. John P. Davin, President of the New York Medical Association, and Rupert Kavanagh, insurance broker, Ridgewood, N. J.

"There is a decided split already apparent in the ranks of Democrats in New York City," said Mr. Waldo. "These Democrats are for Harding because of opposition to Wilsonism and the League of Nations. They are dissatisfied with the attitude of the New York Democratic Party on these questions, which they consider the two important issues of the campaign."

F. Warburg Seeks to Check Exodus Here of Jews in Europe

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Felix M. Warburg of New York, Chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee for American Jewish Relief Funds, who is here, is endeavoring to impress Jewish leaders in Europe with the necessity of discouraging European Jews from flocking to the United States, in order to keep Jewish emigration within reasonable limits.

In this connection Mr. Warburg has conferred with a number of leading Jews in Paris, including Nahum Sokolow, head of the Jewish Delegations Committee.

REPUBLICANS OPEN STATE DRIVE SEPT. 27

Nathan L. Miller and Senator Wadsworth Will Speak in Every County.

A. B. PARKER CAMPAIGN HEAD

Secretary Hugo and Lieut. Col. Roosevelt to Accompany Gubernatorial Nominee.

Following the selection of Addison B. Parker of Watertown as Chairman of the Speakers' Bureau, the Republican State Committee announced yesterday that the speaking campaign in behalf of the State ticket will begin Monday, Sept. 27, and that Nathan L. Miller, nominee for Governor, and Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., candidate for re-election, will speak in every county during October.

Mr. Parker, who managed the primary campaign for the organization candidates, had a conference yesterday with George A. Glynn, State Chairman, and Bertrand H. Snell, Chairman of the Executive Committee. It was decided to consult the County Chairman at the notification of the State nominees at Syracuse next Wednesday as to the dates desired in each county.

Mr Miller and Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo, who was his principal rival for designation by the unofficial State convention, will open the campaign together, and Mr. Hugo will campaign with Mr. Miller for two weeks. Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt will accompany Mr. Miller the last two weeks of the campaign.

Mr. Miller and Senator Wadsworth will speak next Thursday, the former at the Potsdam Fair and the latter at the Albany County Fair at Altamont. Mr. Miller and Secretary Hugo will speak at a meeting of the Rotary Club in Buffalo on Sept. 30.

Elon H. Hooker, another unsuccessful aspirant for the Gubernatorial nomination; ex-Governor Charles S. Whitman, Mrs. Douglas Robinson, ex-Senator Chauncey M. Depew, Ogden L. Mills, Theodore Douglas Robinson, Senator William M. Calder, John Lord O'Brian of Buffalo, Speaker Thaddeus C. Sweet and F. H. LaGuardia, President of the Board of Aldermen of New York City, are also being booked for speaking tours.

DROP FIGHT ON WADSWORTH

Many Republican Women Leaders Accept Primary Result.

Many Republican women who have been most active in opposition to United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., have abandoned their campaign against him since his overwhelming renomination in the Republican primaries, Mrs. Arthur L. Livermore, Chairman of the Republican Women's State Executive Committee and a member of the Executive Committee of the Republican National Committee, said yesterday. Mrs. Livermore issued a statement urging all Republicans to forget past differences and support Senator Wadsworth.

"Policies, laws and reforms rank first and the person to accomplish them second," she said. "Only when the executive and legislative departments are in accord and of the same party can substantial progress be made.

"If you wish Senator Harding to put successfully into effect the principles of the Republican Party, if you wish your Senator and Congressman to help him do so, if you wish your Senator and Congressman to vote for an immediate peace, an Americanized League, a national budget system, a repeal of wartime measures and all other Republican policies, then vote for a Republican Senator and Congressman.

"A Republican vote for a Democratic Senator or Congressman is not only a vote for a person opposed to these policies but it is a vote to elect a man hostile to a Republican President, one who will oppose his wishes and policies on every occasion. With one hand you would vote to put Senator Harding in the place of the greatest responsibility in the land and with the other to shackle him so that he cannot fulfill his responsibility."

"DRY" CONVENTION CLOSES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The national conference of officials and delegates of the Anti-Saloon League of America, which has been in session in Washington for the past week discussing plans for bringing about more rigid enforcement of national prohibition and the Volstead act, closed today with sixty-five meetings in the churches of Washington which were addressed by prohibition leaders from this country, Canada and England.

The dominant note of their pulpit addresses was the necessity of sustaining the Constitution and the enforcement code.

"They made it a second Constitution day," said Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the league. "It was urged that the lawlessness of the brewers and liquor dealers encourages just such crime as took place in New York City. Permitted lawlessness on prohibition in any city encourages all other law breakers. The bomb thrower in New York insists that he has the same right to violate the law against bomb throwing that liquor dealers have to trample the national law and Constitution in the dust.

"Most people are waking up to the fact that the breaking of the law at one point is like the leak in the dike which if not stopped quickly sweeps away the whole structure."

PLAN AID FOR MALONE.

Women Intend Organizing Committee of 100 on Thursday.

A Non-Partisan Women's Committee of One Hundred to work for the election of Dudley Field Malone, Farmer-Labor candidate for Governor, and Miss Rose Schneiderman, candidate of the same party for United States Senator, will be organized at a meeting to be held Thursday at the home of Mrs. Gertrude Williams, 428 Lafayette Street, it was announced yesterday.

A fund of $1,000 has been raised for expenses, and an appeal will be made for further funds to send a "Battalion of Death to Wadsworth" through the State. This battalion, which will campaign for the political demise of the Senior Senator from New York, will consist of women speakers who have been active in the suffrage movement. The committee will participate in the formal opening of the State campaign of the Farmer-Labor Party at the Lexington Opera House next Sunday afternoon.

Colonel Hayward to Preside.

Colonel William Hayward will preside at the meeting of the New York Harding and Coolidge Salesmen's League at Carnegie Hall tonight. Colonel Hayward was in command of the Fifteenth Infantry, a negro regiment, during the war, and was formerly Secretary of the Republican National Committee and Public Service Commissioner.

Food Costs Drop in Many Cities in Month; Decrease in New York Reached 6 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Twenty-seven of the forty-three standard articles going into the American family market basket decreased in price between July 15 and Aug. 15.

In making this announcement today the Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics made public figures showing that during the thirty-day period ended with the middle of August the retail price of potatoes fell 44 per cent. and the price of cabbage went down 41 per cent. The drop in sugar prices is placed at 14 per cent. Most kinds of meat decreased in price.

Eggs went up 11 per cent. in price during the period. With this exception and pork chops, which increased 5 per cent., the increases in other foodstuffs were 2 per cent. or less.

Indications that the decline in food price levels was general are seen in statistics showing that each of the fifty-one cities covered by the bureau's survey reported decreases. Minneapolis led with a decrease of 11 per cent., with its neighbor, St. Paul, second with a 10 per cent. decline. Detroit was third with a 9 per cent. decrease. Decreases in other cities follow:

Eight per cent., Chicago, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Omaha, Peoria and Springfield, Ill.; 7 per cent., Denver and Memphis; 6 per cent., Butte, Cincinnati, Columbus, Newark, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Salt Lake City and Seattle; 5 per cent., Baltimore, Birmingham, Bridgeport, Buffalo, Dallas, Fall River, Louisville, Manchester, N. H., Rochester and Washington; 4 per cent., Atlanta, Boston, Houston, Los Angeles, Mobile, New Haven, Portland, Me., Portland, Ore., Providence, San Francisco, Savannah and Scranton; 3 per cent., Little Rock, New Orleans and Norfolk; 2 per cent., Jacksonville and Richmond, and 1 per cent., Charleston, S. C.

SAYS SOUTH SEEKS PROTECTIVE TARIFF

Poindexter Bases on This Alleged Trend a Plea for Republican Success.

WANTS DUTIES REVISED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Senator Miles Poindexter, Chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, declared in a prepared statement today that on the eve of another national election the most active agitation in behalf of restoration of protective tariff duties came from that section of the country which hitherto had been most strongly opposed to the principle of protection—the South.

"In the North," said Senator Poindexter, "there is comparatively little discussion of tariff legislation, but from the peanut, cottonseed oil, mohair and wool producers of the South and Southwest there comes a vehement demand for protection of their industries from the destructive competition of foreign producers."

Senator Poindexter said this demand for protection from Democratic States had followed closely the action of the Democratic National Convention in adopting a tariff plank reaffirming the traditional attitude of the Democratic Party toward the tariff question.

"The attitude," continued the Senator, "is that a protective tariff is unconstitutional. With their own candidates pledged against the enactment of a protective tariff, Democrats can look only to Republicans for the legislation they desire. All advocates of a protective tariff, or even of a revenue tariff, should bear this in mind when marking their ballots for United States Senator next November.

"The Senate is now Republican by a narrow majority of one vote. The outlook is that the margin will be very slight after the November election. Believers in the Republican principle of protection, as also believers in the policy of raising as large a proportion of our revenues as possible through our custom houses, should make certain that no act or negligence of theirs will assist in turning the control of the United States Senate over to the Democrats. Should the Republicans lose control of the Senate by even one vote they would thereby lose control of the committees, including the Committee on Finance, which shapes the provisions of tariff legislation.

"The tariff legislation enacted by the Democratic Party has failed both as a measure of protection and as a revenue producer. A compilation of statistics has shown that in seven years under Republican tariff laws there were imports of almost $10,500,000,000 on which duties were collected to the amount of nearly $2,200,000,000, or an average rate of 21 per cent, while during seven years of the succeeding Democratic tariff law there were imports, of $19,705,000,000, on which duties were collected to the amount of only $1,631,000,000, or an average of 8 per cent. The Treasury has lost nearly $4,140,000,000 in revenue at a time when revenue was one of our greatest needs.

"Although the South is now most active in demanding a protective tariff, other sections are no less in need of return to that economic policy. The lemon growers of California, the lumber producers of the Pacific Northwest, the wool and meat producers of the Rocky Mountain States, the miners of tungsten and magnesite, who developed new industries during the war—in fact, producers of all commodities that come into competition with the products of other nations where labor is cheap and standards of living low are vitally concerned with the restoration of an import duty which shall represent at least the difference in cost of production at home and abroad.

"Not only by its past record but by its latest official declarations the Democratic Party cannot be depended upon to enact protective tariff legislation. By both their past record and their latest platform pledges Republicans are bound to restore the protective principle in American economic policy. In view of these circumstances too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the importance of electing Republicans to the United States Senate."

GLYNN SAYS MARSHALL WINS

Senator Has Plurality of More Than 35,000, Chairman Asserts.

George A. Glynn, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, denied yesterday a report that State Senator N. Monroe Marshall of Franklin County had been beaten for the Republican nomination for State Treasurer by Theodore N. Baylor of New York City, an insurgent candidate on the ticket headed by Senator George F. Thompson. Senator Marshall was the only one of the organization candidates for nomination for State offices to draw second place on the primary ballot, and the contest was further complicated by the candidacy of Assemblyman John P. Donohue of Putnam County for the same nomination.

Mr. Glynn said that unofficial reports received from most of the Republican County Chairmen in the State indicated that Senator Marshall's plurality would be from 35,000 to 40,000.

Republican Speakers to Meet.

Plans for five hundred meetings a week during October, to be addressed by a staff of three hundred speakers, were announced yesterday by the New York County Republican Committee. The men and women speakers will meet for preliminary organization at the Republican county headquarters, 105 West Fortieth Street, Friday afternoon. Harold G. Aron has been appointed Chairman of the Speakers' Bureau and F. R. Wulfsin Chairman of the Committee on Meetings.

CHECK NEGRO WOMEN IN RUSH TO REGISTER

SCORES WERE IN THE LINE

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 19.—Negro districts yesterday turned loose scores of colored women, all clamoring to qualify to vote. Before 9 o'clock in the morning a line had formed before the door of the office of the central Registrar, and when the office closed tonight more than 100 colored women were still in line demanding that the Registrar remain until they could qualify.

Figures given out tonight show that 161 white and 64 colored women qualified during the day, bringing the total number of newly qualified voters here up to 2,241.

The call of John M. Purcell, the Democratic Chairman, to white women of Richmond to qualify for the ballot and the fact that it was pay day brought out the newly enfranchised women.

Expecting a rush, Mr. Purcell, who had conferred with the Electoral Board, was on the scene early. He had arranged for more thorough examination of applicants and made it impossible for applicants to obtain assistance in preparation of registration papers.

In the early days of the registration it was possible for illiterate negro women to mix with the waiting crowd in the registration office, obtain one of the blue slips which the Registrar handed out, retire to the corridor and have it filled out by a friend, usually a man who came for the purpose. How many passed the Registrar in this manner is not known.

Joseph W. Stewart, Republican Chairman of the Third Congressional District; Captain R. E. Frayser, of Republican campaign headquarters; Edgar Allan, Jr., and other Republicans rushed to the scene on hearing that many colored women were being turned away. They made no complaint, however, and disappeared after a survey of the situation.

Mrs. F. D. Williams, President of the Anti-Suffrage League of Virginia, has issued an appeal to all white women to qualify to vote at once that they may "oppose any radical and dangerous changes in government proposed by radicals."

WOULD BACK COX ON LEAGUE

Dr. J. T. Shaw Favors Organizing Non-Partisan Supporters of Issue.

A letter from Dr. John T. Shaw, professor emeritus of Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, approving the formation of a non-partisan organization to support Governor James M. Cox, Democratic nominee for President, on the League of Nations issue, was made public yesterday by Professor Irving Fisher of Yale University, a member of the Committee of Pro-League Republicans and Independents, with headquarters at 17 East Forty-first Street. Dr. Shaw said:

"The floundering efforts of the Republican candidate and his advisers to appropriate the work of Mr. Wilson and his associates in the Peace Conference and withhold from them the credit for that work seems not only to justify but to demand a straight-out declaration for the League of Nations as the dominant issue in the coming election, and of the formation of such organization as will unite all independents on that issue.

"I am confident that there are others in this community who think as I do on this matter, and who would welcome the movement contemplated."

Colonel Roosevelt Declares It Is "Simply Question of Majorities."

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt passed through Chicago today on his way to New York to attend a special meeting of the Legislature, of which he is a member. He has been on a speaking tour of the West, where he was sent to offset the work of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for Vice President.

"Harding and the Republican Party will sweep the West," was Colonel Roosevelt's prediction. "The people of this country have brought the party to its present dominating position through their good common sense. When they get an issue clearly they go right, and they are aroused to the issues of this campaign. They realize that the Democratic policy, stripped of its cloak of high-sounding phrases, stands out in ugly nakedness as a partial surrender of our national independence. It is simply a question of majorities."

Wasservogel Opens Headquarters.

Isidor Wasservogel, former Assistant District Attorney, who is one of the Republican nominees for Justice of the Supreme Court in the First Judicial District, opened headquarters yesterday in the Marlborough Hotel. Bronx headquarters will be opened at 892 Prospect Avenue, and east side headquarters at Essex and Delancey Streets. Ex-Judge William M. K. Olcott is Chairman of Mr. Wasservogel's Campaign Committee.

Lunn to Speak for Democrats.

SCHENECTADY, Sept. 19.—Mayor George R. Lunn, who was defeated by Lieut. Gov. Walker for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, yesterday accepted Mr. Walker's invitation to serve on Governor Smith's Campaign Committee and to deliver campaign speeches.

BORAH CRITICISES MOORE'S CHARGES

RAPS COX ON PATRIOTISM

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Senator Borah of Idaho, upon his return from a campaign trip through the West, said tonight that the West, and especially the entire group of Northwestern States was strongly Republican. He took exception of Edmond H. Moore's statement that the Republican Party was appealing to the discontented.

"Mr. Moore's statement, published this morning, that the fearful happening in Wall Street was caused by Republicans appealing to the discontented would never have been made except in the distressing exigency of a desperate campaign. If this incident has any connection with present politics it might have been thought to spring from want of faith in and devotion to our country so manifest in certain policies now being advocated.

"If the press dispatches are correct, when Governor Cox's attention was called to a creed heretofore considered respectable of 'America first,' he said in effect that was to him as 'Deutschland uber alles.' In other words, to love your country better than you love any other country, to believe in your own institutions above all others, is to be denounced as no better than the advocates of Prussianism. If 'America first' is to be discredited and denounced, if national devotion is to be discarded, make up your mind that we will not be able to confine these outbreaks to sporadic explosions; that we will have to prepare for disobedience to laws and that disregard for country which expresses itself in riot, bloodshed and chronic revolution.

"The basis of all good citizenship, high or low, and the foundation on which rests obedience to law, is this love of country, which is no love at all unless it exceeds that for all other countries."

In the West, Senator Borah said, he found many Democrats who had openly expressed themselves in favor of the Republican ticket, declaring that they wanted government restored to its original principles. Governor Cox's attitude on the League of Nations and his doubtful position on prohibition, Mr. Borah asserted, had worked against him throughout the West.

SAY WOMAN IS EMBEZZLER.

Clerk in Jersey Town Collector's Office Arrested After Illness.

Special to The New York Times.

KEARNY, N. J., Sept. 19.—Miss Helen Grant, a clerk in the office of the town collector here, was arrested at her home at 82 Quincy Avenue this afternoon by the Hudson County police on a complaint by the town counsel, which stated that auditors had found a discrepancy of $15,000 in the accounts of the office. She is held in jail at Harrison on a charge of embezzlement, and the town collector, Harry K. Calthness, is held in $10,000 bail on the same charge.

Early in August auditors started to check the books of the collector. They reported discrepancies of $11,000 in August, and a $4,600 shortage in September was reported later. Miss Grant was on a vacation then and was not questioned until her return, when physicians said that she had suffered a nervous breakdown and could not be moved to the jail. Policemen remained on duty for eight days and nights at her home, where she lives with a widowed mother and a younger brother and sister.

Police surgeons, who were summoned again today, decided that Miss Grant's condition was so improved that she could be taken to the Hudson County Jail and placed in the matron's rooms there under guard. Police Recorder Henry A. Wimmer was not in Harrison when she was arrested, so that it was impossible to hold a hearing immediately for the fixing of bail. Both she and Calthness deny knowledge of any discrepancy in the accounts.

FIND CATTLE RAISING A PRECARIOUS VENTURE

Nebraska Survey of Feeding Costs Shows Losses to Ranchers the Last Two Years.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—According to cost of production investigations conducted by the Department of Agriculture in co-operation with the University of Nebraska in parts of Nebraska during the past two years, the average cost of cornfed cattle laid down at market was $14.91 per hundredweight for 2,295 head fed in the Winter of 1918-19; $13.45 for 3,041 cattle in a survey study during the Winter of 1919-20, and an average of $13.39 for an additional 795 cattle upon which detailed cost figures were secured during the same Winter.

The costs of some droves were found to vary widely from these average figures, with the major portion going to market the first Winter (1918-19) carrying an expense bill of from $13 to $18 a hundredweight, while in 1919-20 the costs of most of the cattle were between $11 and $17.

The fact thus far brought out by the investigation would indicate that during the past two years, in the district covered by the survey, cattle feeding was a precarious venture, more likely to be unprofitable than not. There was an average loss per head of $3.17 on the cattle for which records were obtained in 1918-19, and of $10.69 and $14.57 on two groups for which records were obtained in 1919-20.

These figures are the results of the first two years' work of a five-year study of the basic factors of the cost of fattening cattle, which is being conducted in Nebraska by the Office of Farm Management and Farm Economics, in co-operation with the University of Nebraska and the Bureau of Animal Industry and the United States Department of Agriculture.

Similar studies are being conducted in Iowa, Missouri, Illinois and Indiana.

Free Synagogue Renames School for Dr. Cantor.

The religious school of the downtown branch of the Free Synagogue will hereafter be known as the Bernard Cantor School of the Free Synagogue. Dr. Cantor was murdered a few weeks ago while on relief work in the Ukraine.

This tribute has been decided upon by the Executive Council of the Free Synagogue, of which the Rev. Dr. Stephen S. Wise is the rabbi. It has also created a Bernard Cantor Fellowship. The first holder of this will be Nathaniel Cantor, a brother of the martyred rabbi, who up to this time has been a student at the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati.

Six Hungarians Held in Genoa as Suspects in Bombing Case

GENOA, Sept. 18.—Six Hungarians have been arrested here since the explosion of the bomb in the Stock Exchange on Friday. They had plenty of money, but none of them had identification papers.

Police officials have ascertained the bomb which exploded in the Stock Exchange had been made recently, and for this reason there is some suspicion that it was turned out by a plant occupied by workmen. Attempts have been made to blow up several fashionable restaurants, one of which was located in the basement of the Stock Exchange Building.

Two high explosive bombs similar to the one that exploded in the Stock Exchange here on Friday have been found by the police in a livery stable, but so far the persons who hid them there have not been discovered.

KILLS 1, INJURES 3 LEARNING TO DRIVE

Richmond Terrace Man Held on Homicide Charge After Sidewiping Another Car.

CATSKILL MAN IS VICTIM

Woman Dead and Seven Other Persons Hurt In Other Auto Accidents of Day.

While he was learning to drive a new automobile under the instruction of a licensed chauffeur, George Blanchard of 2,032 Richmond Terrace, S. I., yesterday sidewiped another heavy touring car at Amboy Road and Bossville Avenue, Princess Bay, S. I. One person was killed and four injured in the crash.

A. P. Gillies, manager of the American Ice Company at Catskill, N. Y., was so severely injured that he died in an ambulance on the way to the Memorial Hospital. Mrs. Gillies and another woman passenger in the wrecked car, Mrs. Winnie Davis, also of Catskill, are in the Memorial Hospital in a serious condition, both with possible fractures of the skull and internal injuries.

Less serious injuries were suffered by Mrs. Winifred Travis, wife of E. R. Travis of Catskill, who was taking the party to Asbury Park, N. J., in his car. Travis was not injured, although the other car cleaved his car almost in half directly behind the driver's seat occupied by him.

Police of the Tottenville Station held Blanchard on a charge of homicide and driving a car without a driver's license. He was accompanied by a licensed chauffeur, David Price, of 1,619 Richmond Terrace, Port Richmond. The police said that Blanchard bought the car two weeks ago.

One woman was killed and seven other persons injured in other automobile and traffic accidents yesterday. Mrs. Elisabeth Keelan, the widowed mother of nine children, was run down and killed near her home at 2,268 Washington Avenue, the Bronx. Her companion, Mrs. Charles Smee, of 2,191 Morris Avenue, the Bronx, was taken to Fordham Hospital with serious injuries.

Other persons injured were Benjamin V. Benjamin, of 93 Main Street, Stamford, Conn.; George Cecekuta, 4 years old, of 909 Kelly Avenue, the Bronx; Arthur Gross, of 503 West Forty-sixth Street; Pauline Lewis, 8 years old, of 67 West Sixty-ninth Street; Austin Akontin, 12 years old, of 2355 Eighth Avenue, and William Ehrion of 481 Alabama Avenue, Brooklyn.

CHOKES RIVAL TO DEATH IN 30-MINUTE FIGHT

Max Cohen of Chicago Confesses to Killing David Slavin Before Woman.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—A hand-to-hand fight for thirty minutes late last night between two men, rivals for the affections of a woman, ended only when the more powerful choked the other to death.

The tragedy, which occurred in the apartment of Mrs. Jean Lawrence, 4,221 Grand Boulevard, resulted in the arrest today of Max Cohen, 5,430 Prairie Avenue, son of a wealthy jeweler, charged with strangling to death David Buckley Slavin, 33, a salesman living at 4,213 Sheridan Road. Mrs. Lawrence, a divorcee, for whose affections the two men fought, and who, it is said, watched the death struggle, is held by the police as a material witness.

Both Mrs. Lawrence and Cohen were found in the apartment with the body an hour after Slavin died. Cohen made a confession to the police which was corroborated by Mrs. Lawrence. According to their story, Slavin had for two weeks persisted in forcing his attentions upon Mrs. Lawrence. Ten days ago she caused his arrest. Last night, Cohen said, Slavin appeared at the Lawrence apartment, rang the bell and asked to be admitted. Mrs. Lawrence refused the request and Slavin began to pound the door. Then Cohen opened the door and the man entered.

"The struggle started almost immediately," Cohen told the police. "He insulted her and insulted me and threw a vase at me. I struck him and then we clinched. Finally I got my fingers around his throat. I choked and choked and choked—gradually he ceased his struggling. Finally his hands fell back. He was dead."

FIND SHIP STOWAWAY DEAD.

Man, Evidently a German, Asphyxiated During Voyage from Danzig.

A stowaway, about 26 years old, believed to have been a German, was found dead last night in the forward hold of the American steamship Susquehanna when the hatches were taken off at her North River Pier at the foot of West Thirty-fourth Street. The ship's doctor said that death was due to asphyxiation, as the hatches had not been taken off for two weeks during the voyage from Danzig.

The man was five feet ten inches tall, weighed 157 pounds, had light hair and blue eyes and wore a dark suit issued by the German Government in 1900 according to a tag on the coat.

COX SPURS FIGHT TO WIN CALIFORNIA

IMPRESSED THE CROWDS

Hearty Response Given to His Pleas for Entering the League of Nations.

NOMINEE OFF TO SAN DIEGO

Special to The New York Times.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Sept. 19.—Governor James M. Cox, according to all indications, has made an impression upon many of the people of Northern California. His discussion of the League of Nations and progressive government from his point of view has been received with cordiality and he has also put vigor into the fight.

The Governor closed his campaign in the northern part of the State with an address last night in the Oakland Auditorium before a great audience. His voice was a bit ragged, but it is believed that he will not experience any serious difficulty in carrying on his fight.

Democratic leaders here, among them Gavin McNab and Senator Key Pittman, Western manager of the campaign, are enthusiastic over what Governor Cox has done. It was pretty well realized here that he had a difficult, if not a desperate, task upon his shoulders when he entered the State, as there had been evidence of a distinct Republican swing. It is declared by Democrats that conditions appear to be much more favorable today and that the State is not to be classed as safely Republican.

Wheeler Felicitates Cox.

Governor Cox was greatly impressed by the response which he received when he discussed the League of Nations. At the meeting in Oakland he was heartily cheered when he advocated the entry of the United States into the League. After the meeting Benjamin Ide Wheeler shook hands with the Governor and expressed the view that his argument in behalf of the League was "unanswerable."

There is evidence also of a very strong sentiment among women voters of Northern California on the League issue. When Governor Cox started to hammer away on the League issue women in the audience cheered enthusiastically. Democratic leaders predict that there will be a heavy vote by the women in favor of Governor Cox because of his advocacy of the League.

The Irish question came up again last night when a man in the gallery asked the Governor to make known his stand in regard to the independence of Ireland. The Governor replied with the statement which he had made on several occasions, that he would call to the attention of the League of Nations the question of self-determination for all nations if he is elected President. Then the Governor asked if Senator Harding had stated his position.

There has been much that is encouraging to Governor Cox in the nature of his reception in Northern California. The political campaign in that part of the State has been lagging a bit, and there has not been effective organization work, at least where the Democrats are concerned. It is asserted that Governor Cox made considerable headway both by his address at

BROWNS JOIN RANKS OF YANKEE BEATERS

GET ONLY PAIR OF SINGLES

St. Louis Batsmen Drive Thormahlen from Box and Pound Collins, Too—Record Crowd on Hand.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 19.—The Yanks folded up like so many morning glories in the sun before the sleight-of-hand flips of Dixie Davis this afternoon and the Browns won by a score of 6 to 1 before a record breaking crowd of 29,000 spectators. All the one-time sluggers from Babe Ruth down couldn't have hit Dixie with a canoe paddle. He held them to two hits, the heroes who made the stingy bangs being Pratt in the seventh and Peck in the ninth.

Today's bump by the Browns sent the Yanks deeper into third place, as both the Indians and White Sox, as usual, came out on top.

This is the fifth time this season Davis has pitched against the Yanks, and the fifth time he has turned them back to defeat. His performance this afternoon was a work of art, and only thirty batsmen faced him during the matinée.

The Huggins pitching staff is still in the doldrums. After the Browns had made nine hits in four innings off Herbie Thormahlen's tosses, he was batted out of the box and Rip Collins came to the rescue. Rip did pretty well until the seventh, when the Browns fell on him for three hits and a couple of additional runs.

Babe Has a Bad Day.

Ruth is still in a batting slump and this afternoon he added fielding sins to his transgressions of omission. The Mauling Monarch fouled to Severeid on his first trip to the bat in the first. He walked in the fourth and died stealing. He grounded out to Sisler in the seventh, and was the last man up in the ninth and died, Gedeon to Sisler. Babe's fiftieth home run is still in the incubator, and it looks as if it wouldn't be hatched for a while yet.

The Browns have been tough cracking for the Yanks all season, and now, when victories mean so much to Huggins's lads, they are getting tougher. The stick work of the Yanks was pitifully weak today and they played as if they were still in a daze after the terrible shock they received in Chicago.

The crowd this afternoon was a record-breaking one for St. Louis. When the Yanks were here in June they set a record mark of 27,562, but there were more spectators than that jammed around the field this afternoon. Unofficial estimates had it that there were more than 29,000 present. Mounted policemen rode back and forth in front of the crowd and kept the spectators behind the ropes.

Ruth's band from St. Mary's Industrial School in Baltimore paraded around the field before the game and got a cordial greeting. The fans were fringed even on the roof of the grand stand and every other available spot inside the park was taken up.

Davis Master from Outset.

Dixie Davis cast his old spell over the Yanks in the first inning. He fanned Peck, and Gerber chucked Pipp out at first. The usual roar went up as Babe came up for his first crack at the ball. The bazoo of bang hoisted the highest foul that ever soared over Severeid's roof. But Hank caught it.

Gerber got a hit to third in the Browns' first, and Gedeon hit into a double play. Sisler singled to right and was safe at second, when he tried to steal and Pratt dropped the ball. Jacobson got another hit off Wardie's feet, but he threw Williams out at first on the next play.

Thormahlen got through the second inning without damage, but Davis opened the third with a single to centre. Gerber sacrificed and Gedeon skied to Ruth. Sisler laced a single to centre and, although Ruth made a great throw to the plate, Davis beat it home by an eighth of an inch. Sisler going to second on the throw in. Jacobson beat out a slow roller to Pratt and by lightning base galloping Sisler scored, Hannah dropping Pipp's throw to the plate. Williams doubled to the field crowd, Jacobson halted at third on the ground rule. Smith fanned and closed the inning.

Jacobson Pulls Fielding Gems.

Jacobson made a great catch of Peck's hoist in the fourth, but he made even a greater grab when he went back to the edge of the crowd and pulled down Pipp's long drive. Ruth got a pass and died stealing.

Tobin got a double to centre in the Browns' fourth, Ruth failing in an attempt to make a one-handed catch. Severeid walked and Davis rolled out to Pipp, both runners going up a base. Gerber shot a single to Lewis, and Tobin and Severeid crossed the plate. Lewis fumbled the ball and Gerber went to second.

That was about all, for Thormahlen and Rip Collins went in to try his luck. Sammy Vick made a fine catch of Gedeon's foul and Gerber raced to third after the catch. The session ended when Sisler popped to Peck.

With one out in the sixth, Ruth muffed Severeid's easy fly, and Davis hit into a double play. The crowd guyed Babe when he came back to the bench, but the slugger smiled and lifted his cap, just as he does when he makes a home run.

Pipp walked in the Yanks' seventh and Babe hit a high bounder to first. Sisler leaped high and pulled down the ball, while Pipp went to second. Pratt made the first hit off Davis when he poked a single to centre which pushed Pipp over the plate. As Vick fanned Pratt was doubled stealing a second.

Two More St. Louis Runs.

Gerber opened theh Browns half of the same chapter with a single to centre. Gedeon singled to centre and when Ruth made a wild peg to third to head off Gerber the shortstop scored and Gedeon went to third. Sisler rolled a bit of a bunt to the infield and Pratt tossed the ball to Pipp, who muffed it, and Gedeon scored.

Jacobson singled to centre, Sisler trotting to third, and Baby Doll took second on Ruth's futile throw to third to head off Sisler. Williams grounded out to first, Pratt covering the sack. Smith rolled to Wardie and Sisler was nipped between the bases. Jacobson taking third. Collins tossed Tobin out at first foo the closing casualty of the inning.

Severeid doubled to the right field crowd in the eighth, but was caught napping a few seconds afterward, Hannah to Peck. Davis filed to Vick and Gerber got his fourth hit of the day when he doubled to the right field populace. Ward threw Gedeon out at first.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 19.—Bob Meusel showed such a strong inclination to rest during the White Sox series that he was benched today and Sam Vick played in right field.

Urban Shocker, who has given the Yanks trouble all the season, has not yet recovered from the injury he received while sliding into the plate at the Polo Grounds and is still on crutches.

Whenever Umpire Dinneen called a strike on Sisler, the crowd was unanimous in its judgment that the umpire was a robber.

The Yanks and Browns are now tied in the season series. Each troupe has won ten games.

Dixie Davis is also known as Jeff, which is the same name as the king of hoboes, but this Jeff is no tramp.

Only fifteen Yanks faced Davis in the first five innings. He fanned seven batsmen and gave only two passes.

Brother Mathias, the Baltimore priest who taught Babe Ruth how to play baseball, is traveling with the St. Mary's Boys' Band. He says he used to spank Babe when he was a kid if he didn't make a hit. It looks as if he ought to take him over his knee again.

The New York players are so peeved and disappointed over their downfall in Chicago that they sulked when the breaks went against them today.

The Yanks can blame a lot of things on the manager, but it isn't the manager's fault when the pitchers are lambasted as they have been during the last four games.

Robins Move Closer to Goal; Outlook for Indians Brighter

By defeating the Pirates at Ebbets Field yesterday in the opener of a two-game series the Robins moved a bit closer to the National League pennant. The Giants managed to beat the Reds at the Polo Grounds and thereby maintained the five-game difference between themselves and the league leaders, while pushing the Reds a bit further out of the pennant fight. The Giants are now favored to finish second. Brooklyn has eight more games to play, New York has twelve and Cincinnati fifteen. If the Robins break even the Giants must win twelve straight to take the pennant and the Reds must win fifteen straight. The standing under these conditions for the three teams would be:

Brooklyn	91	63	.591
New York	92	62	.597
Cincinnati	91	62	.595

If the Robins win five of their eight games the Giants must take twelve straight to tie them, while Cincinnati cannot even tie with fifteen straight victories. If the Robins win six the Giants cannot even tie them.

In the American League Cleveland is looming up as a strong favorite, despite the spurt of the White Sox. The Indians have thirteen more games to play, the White Sox have ten and the Yankees nine. If Cleveland wins seven of its thirteen games Chicago must take eight of its ten and New York nine straight to beat out the Indians. The standing then would be:

	Won	Lost	P. C.
Chicago	97	57	.630
New York	97	57	.630

If Cleveland wins nine of its thirteen games the Yankees cannot tie the Indians. The White Sox, though handicapped, are still very much in the race.

BROOKLYN DOWNS PIRATES IN NINTH

BOTH PITCHERS IN FORM

Pfeffer and Cooper Effective, but Robins Make Their Hits Count—Score a Tie Up to Final Inning.

Bill McKechnie and Walter Schmidt between them messed up a fine, healthy ball game for Pittsburgh at Ebbets Field yesterday. With a Brooklyn runner on second in the ninth and the score tied, Walter threw to Bill, trying to stop said runner from dashing to third, and Bill got his fingers entangled in his thumbs and let the throw ooze through him. While the pellet rolled briskly down the left field line the runner, Bernie Neis, scampered in the opposite direction with the run that beat the Pirates, 4 to 3.

The play that broke up the game was the climax of a nip-and-tuck battle between Wilbur Cooper and Big Jeff Pfeffer. The Pirates scored two runs in the first, but the Robins promptly erased the lead in their half of the chapter. Then the Pirates again jumped into the van in the sixth, only to have Jimmy Johnston step up to the plate in the Brooklyn half and smite a home run into the left field bleachers. And there matters stood when the Robins began their portion of the last inning.

Neis, the first batter to face Cooper in the ninth, shot a drive at Bigbee in left that bounced off the fielder's shins for a double. Three or four individuals showed their enthusiasm by hurling their straw hats away, but the majority stuck close to their new Fall headgear and merely shouted deliriously. Zack Wheat marched to the plate with the evident intention of sending Mr. Neis to third by means of a sacrifice, but, before he could carry out this design McKechnie and Schmidt produced their little act. On the first ball Wheat tried to bunt but missed. Neis, who had started for third, kept on down the base line when he saw that McKechnie was off the bag. It was then that Walter threw to Bill, who was scrambling back to the bag. The throw was low and to the mark but as Bill turned to nip the runner the ball shot through his hands into left. Neis raced across the plate before the pill could be retrieved.

Five Hits for Robins.

The Robins were outhit by a margin of eight to five, but their blows came at the proper moments. Johnston's home-run drive, for instance, was better than three or four of the Pittsburgh bingles. Pfeffer was hit hard in the first and the sixth, and was rescued from further trouble by some dazzling infield work by Kilduff and Olson. Petey engineered a double play in the sixth that cut the Pirates short after they had scored one run and taken the lead again. A peculiar coincidence was that the score was tied at the end of each inning but the ninth, when the Robbins settled the hash of the pesky Pirates.

Wilbur Cooper turned in one of his customary good games. After a bad start, in which the Superbas garnered two runs and three hits, the southpaw allowed only one hit up to the ninth. This was the homer by Johnston in the sixth, several glittering catches by the Gibson outfield cut down potential base hits, the high spot being Southworth's one-handed grab of Miller's drive to right centre in the fifth. Bigbee went out to the left field stand in the third to spear Neis's long fly.

The Sunday crowd, numbering about 20,000, filled every seat in both the grandstand and the emergency bleachers in left, and a line of standees fringed the rear part of the grandstand. The cool weather, however, kept the attendance below normal figures.

Billy Southworth led the Pirate attack with the stick. The fleet outfielder drove in the first run in the initial frame with a single to right, and he also started trouble in the sixth with a triple between Myers and Neis, scoring later on a single. Brooklyn's three hits were collected by Olson, Johnston, Neis, Wheat and Myers, the lower end oof the batting order having a quiet day of it.

The Pirates started with a rush in the first canto. Bigbee, first batter, smacked a single to left and Olson shoved along a second by Summa's sacrifice. Southworth scored Bigbee with a single to left, but Cutshaw encouraged the home fans by lofting to Johnston. Grimm's drive to right bounced off the wall, but was held to a single. Southworth going to third. From the far corner he tallied on McKechnie's infield hit over second, which Kilduff speared too late for a play at first.

Olson Paves Way.

Olson paved the way for Brooklyn's two-run uprising in the same inning. He singled solidly to centre. Johnston received a walk and Neis dropped a fly into McKechnie's glove. Zack Wheat, however, did the right thing by sending a Texas leaguer over second on which Olson scored. Myers brought Johnston across the plate with a sharp one-base hit to left.

Cooper got a single in the second with one out, but Bigbee and Summa were easy for Pfeffer. For the next three frames the Smoky City clan went out in order and the Robins did likewise with the exception of the fourth, when Koney got a life on Traynor's wild throw to first.

The sixth looked black for the Robins. Southworth began with a long triple that Neis missed by a matter of inches, the ball hitting his glove but rolling out. Cutshaw lined a single to left, scoring Southworth, and there was still nobody out. On Grimm's tap, however, Cutshaw was forced at second, Olson to Kilduff. McKechnie then grounded to Kilduff, who stepped on second and threw to Koney for a double killing.

Johnston's homer in the Brooklyn half of the sixth was a terrific smash that went over Bigbee's head and bounded into the left field bleachers. The circuit blow tied the score.

In the ninth Pittsburgh again became dangerous. Grimm's grass-cutter went through Koney. McKechnie and Traynor filed out, but Schmidt advanced Grimm to second with a single through Olson. Cooper sent a low drive that Wheat nipped off his laces for the third out. Then came the winning Flatbush rally.

TWO RUNS ENOUGH FOR THE INDIANS

Bagby Allows Red Sox Only Four Hits and Cleveland Wins Game by Shutout.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 19.—Cleveland defeated Boston in the first game of the series here today, 2 to 0, in a pitchers' battle between Pennock and Bagby. It was Bagby's twenty-ninth victory of the season. Approximately 27,000 fans sat through the chilly weather to witness the game.

Bagby held Boston to four hits, two of which were made by Hooper, the first man up in the first and third innings. He never was in trouble until the ninth inning when, with two men out he walked Vitt and Menosky, but wound up the game by striking out Hendryx.

Pennock had the Indians at his mercy except in the sixth inning when Cleveland scored the only runs of the game. After Wambsganss had lined to Scott, Speaker doubled against the right field wall. Smith duplicated the hit, scoring Speaker. Gardner sent a weak grounder to Pennock when he threw him out. Then Johnston singled to centre and Smith completed the circuit.

With the exception of the ninth inning only one Boston player reached second base. In the sixth inning Brady doubled with one out. Hooper walked but Pennock and Hiller fanned.

That extra dividend had the players of both teams on their toes from star tto finish and they put up a battle worthy of clubs still nursing strong hopes of winning the old streamer. The Giants finally got the verdict after a long and hectic struggle, Larry Doyle carrying the winning run over with none out in New York's ele

DOUBLE DEFEAT FOR BRITISH GOLF PAIR

Ray and Vardon Trail Jones and Walker in Morning Round at Englewood, 3 and 2.

SAME SCORE IN AFTERNOON

Atlanta Youngster Teams with Oswald Kirkby in Second 18-Hole Match with Invaders.

Ted Ray and Harry Vardon spent their Sabbath a-golfing, but not very profitably. Instead of playing against only one set of opponents yesterday at the Englewood Country Club they were matched against Bobby Jones and the home club pro, Cyril Walker, in the morning, and against Jones and Oswald Kirkby in the afternoon. But it made no difference. Both pairs defeated them by 3 and 2 in the eighteenth hole exhibitions.

Kirkby was scheduled to be Jones's partner for a day's frolic around thirty-six holes, but the former Metropolitan champion came back from Garden City Saturday night with a hard cold, and he spent so much time with his physician yesterday morning getting treatment that he was unable to appear at Englewood until the afternoon.

It was doubtful whether the two barnstorming Englishmen were more tired than Jones, who has been having a daily workout on Metropolitan courses since coming North for the national championship. But Bobby, who returns to Atlanta today, devoted his last engagement in the North to demonstrating that he still has enough golfing tricks in his bag of clubs to make a few of his elders step lively. Jones carried most of the burden in the morning, starting at the very first hole when Walker picked up, leaving Bobby the ordeal of halving with Ray in par fours. With few exceptions Jones's driping was equal to the tremendous swipes of Ray, and on the greens the youngster had a knack of sinking them from all angles.

Britons' Putting Weak.

Neither Vardon nor Ray seemed to be able to much with their putters, especially in the morning, when no tap more than eight feet long was holed out. For that matter, their game yesterday seemed to be listless and careless. What they need is a couple of days for resting. Both took three putts on the eighth, and here Jones won the first hole, Walker picking up. Bobby followed this by winning the tenth and eleventh with par fours, Walker making the same on the latter, but they went to only 2 up when Vardon bagged a winning 4 on the thirteenth. Officially the match came to an end at the sixteenth, when the Britishers needed 5 apiece; Jones and Walker taking 4.

More Interesting Battle.

Although the afternoon provided a more interesting battle, none of the quartet came close enough to clipping par to cause any undue commotion. Jones and Kirkby got off to a disappointing start. The former sliced to rough and played his second out short, and Kirkby slammed his first into a trap. As a result the Britons went to 1 up, both getting par fours, Ray's approach putt going to the very lip of the cup. The first evidence of brilliant putting—and, after all, golf galleries like best to see long taps on the greens—came on the fourth. Ray's approach was short, but he handled his old gooseneck club with rare skill in sinking a fifteen-footer to save his four. Kirkby, too, left himself short and had to hole a nine-footer for the half, Jones having consumed three putts for a five. The Americans squared the match on the fifth, both taking fours, Jones rimming the cup with his third. Here Vardon's approach was short and Ray, who got on, was baffled by an undulating green and took three putts. Both Englishmen took three putts on the sixth and lost the hole, and then went 2 down when Kirkby was the sole one of the quartet to get a par 3 on the seventh.

Ray had to muster all his skill on the eighth, holing a putt fully ten feet long to save the half with Kirkby, after Vardon had taken five. But the latter was ready in the ninth, sinking an eighteen-footer to win.

The tenth hole, 333 yards long, tricked both the visitors, and Jones put his side 2 up by getting a birdie 3 with a twelve-foot tap. Vardon's drive landed in rough behind a tree, and in scaling this obstacle he landed his second short. Ray shanked his approach and got into a trap.

Jones Ends Match.

Jones had a streak of topsy-turvy playing for a time, trapping his approach on the eleventh, and not only slicing out of bounds on the thirteenth, but slamming his replayed drive into a nest of traps and then kitting his fourth to more trouble. As a result he was credited with a 7. "But this same Atlanta youngster carried off the match with a commendable piece of work on the sixteenth. Here Kirkby had pushed his second over the green to an almost unplayable lie in a ditch. Vardon had sliced to rough and put his second into a trap short of the green. Then when Ray failed to gain the green on his second and then missed his four, Jones had a glorious opportunity. His second was a few yards over the green, but not in long grass. He chipped back to within three feet of the cup with an approaching iron, and then sank this putt.

The afternoon cards follow:

Vardon and Ray at Garden City.

Harry Vardon and Edward Ray will play an exhibition foursome today on the links of the Cherry Valley Club at Garden City. The British golfers will oppose Jack Dowling of Scarsdale and Frank McNamara of the Cherry Valley Club in a thirty-six-hole match, of which eighteen holes will be contested in the morning at 10 o'clock. The afternoon play will start at 2:30. Tom McNamara, Frank's brother, paired with Dowling, defeated the British pros in one of their first exhibition matches of the Summer here by 7 and 6, and today's match will offer the visitors an opportunity for revenge.

MORNINGSIDE TEAM WINS BY ONE POINT

Beats St. Christopher Athletes by 28 to 27 in Harlem and Heights A. L. Meet.

Scoring three victories and a number of other point placements in the program of nine events, athletes of the Morningside A. C. yesterday carried off the team laurels in the annual handicap track and field meet of the Harlem and Heights Athletic League on Macomb's Dam Park, by the slim margin of one point. The wearers of the winged M garnered 28 tallies and just managed to nose out the dusky athletes of the St. Christopher Club, who registered 27 points. The Glencoe A. C. track team finished third with 23 markers.

Harry Braverman was the individual star in the Morningside victory. He accounted for one individual success and aided his club's medley relay team to win another in the medley event. Braverman's individual triumph came in the running broad jump, in which he was allowed a handicap of one foot. The Morningside jumper netted a distance of 21 feet 6½ inches, which gave him premier position over J. Carter, St. Christopher Club, by a matter of two and one-half inches.

Harry Morrell scored the other success for the victorious club. Morrell, with the liberal allowance of 45 seconds in the one-mile walk, showed his heels to a fair field in 7:33 4-5.

Two of the events were won by members of the St. Christopher Club. W. Stokeley showed the greatest endurance in the two-mile run and led home a capable field of rivals in 10:02 4-5. In the half-mile event Cliff Sherman showed superiority and broke the line a winner in 2:00 2-5.

Dave Rosenberg, Glencoe A. C. weight man, was the only successful scratch competitor. Rosenberg was on the honor mark in the 12-pound shot-put and emerged victorious with a toss of 40 feet 10 inches. This heave was eleven inches in excess of the net figures of J. Torrocco, a clubmate, who was allowed three feet.

The 100-yard dash resulted in a stirring race, in which the three leaders at the finish were separated by scant margins. E. Padmore, Alpha P. C. C., was the winner by less than a foot from Irving Melnick, Morningside A. C. R. Benedict, Glencoe A. C., was right at Melnick's shoulder as the sprinters flashed over the line. The time was 9 4-5 seconds for the winner, who started five and one-half yards in front of the line.

A girls' sprinting race was added to the program and provided a considerable surprise. Helen McGann, a thirteen-year-old miss holding membership in Troop 4, Girl Scouts, the Bronx, broke the line a winner by a close margin over Miss Mae Kahl of the Morningside A. C., who has held a monopoly on girls' sprinting events in the local district. Miss McGann's time was 13 4-5 seconds.

The summaries:

100-Yard Dash, Handicap—Won by E. Padmore, Alpha Physical C. C. (5½ yards); Irving Melnick, Morningside A. C. (3½ yards), second; R. Benedict, Glencoe A. C. (8 yards), third; H. Foster, St. Christopher A. C. (5 yards), fourth. Time—0:09 4-5.

WATER HAZARDS ABOUND.

New Grassy Sprain Golf Club to Have Unusual Course.

A new golf course, designed for the busy business man who wants to get out to the first tee after hours, and not waste time on the journey, is rapidly nearing completion in Westchester. This club, already named the Grassy Sprain Golf Club, is located in the lower part of the county in the village of Bronxville. Its membership, limited to 250, will comprise for the most part prominent bankers, brokers and business men who, although already members of other clubs, nevertheless saw the need of a course as near as possible to Manhattan. Grassy Sprain is twenty-eight minutes by train from Grand Central and about a half hour by automobile.

This course is being designed by Devereux Emmet, architect of many links in the metropolitan district, and will be ready for play early next season. Most of the fairway has been seeded and work on many of the greens is nearing completion. The course has a playing length of 6,375 yards.

Emmet is especially enthusiastic about the brooks and other water hazards, for Grassy Sprain is a course that abounds in mental as well as actual obstacles. The architect said:

"I predict that this will become one of the noted golf clubs of the country, both by reason of its location, which will bring it to the attention of every one who motors through Westchester County, and on account of its interesting play. While the excellent topography of the land is equaled by other courses, I know of no other which has such an interesting variety of natural water hazards. The length of the various brooks and open water courses on the property is more than a mile."

Among the organizers are representatives of the younger Wall Street element, comprising brokers, bankers, insurance men and corporation officials. George deKay Glider is Secretary of the Organization Committee.

BASEBALL

Although neither Giants nor Yankees has yet reached the point where they are entirely eliminated from consideration for the world's series, each team is laboring under such a heavy handicap that even their most optimistic followers are willing to talk of next year's pennant races and to discuss a city series next month at the Polo Grounds. Before another week ends it is likely that a challenge will be issued by one club and accepted by the other for a series to determine the championship of Manhattan. This will be far from the world's series to which each team aspired, but it will receive a more enthusiastic reception than either of the past city series between Manhattan's major league representatives.

When Giants met Yankees in other years the sentiment was almost entirely for the National League. McGraw's team had been the big team in the eyes of New Yorkers, while the Yankees were rated simply as one of the clubs in the American League. Few expected the American Leaguers to do much against the Giants and for that reason the series suffered. Now there is enough American League sentiment in New York to make such a set of games stand out. The Yankees have won thousands of admirers and the Giants have retained much of their old following. If neither team can get into the world's series a clash for local honors will serve as partial atonement for thhe double failure. New York fans would welcome such a contest and in view of their support of each club this season their wishes are entitled to consideration.

As far as any protest by the officials of the Brooklyn clubs is concerned there need be no occasion for worry. President Ebbets has announced positively that he has no complaint to make against the Giants and Yankees getting together, so that should end the matter. It might be mentioned in passing that such a series would not interfere in any way with the fight for the blue ribbon of baseball, and furthermore a protest could not be considered seriously. The two Manhattan clubs are outside the territorial limits which Brooklyn controls under baseball law and therefore a protest would be out of order.

While officials of the Giants and Yankees decline to talk in public about a city series, it is understood that they have discussed the proposition. The players of both teams, even when pennant hopes have been shattered, are nourishing lively pennant hopes, have been talking city series for some time in the event of pennant failures, and all strongly favor the plan. In view of the work done by both clubs this season the players should not be denied this opportunity to indulge in a little activity of their own while the big clash is under way. Nor would it be surprising if such a series drew more in the aggregate than the world's series will draw.

TURF

The offer of $50,000 for a race with Man o' War, Sir Barton and Exterminator as participants at Windsor, Ontario, and the reported acceptance by Samuel D. Riddle and Commander J. K. L. Ross for the first two named horses, have raised among local racing folk the question of why inducements have not been advanced to bring the event to one of the New York tracks. A meeting among these three horses should provide the greatest turf contest of the year, and it seems strange that Windsor should be allowed to outbid the metropolis for it.

It is true that tracks operating under the mutuel system of betting are better able pecuniarily to offer large purses than the New York associations, but a race such as is now proposed would be such a remarkable attraction that the present offer could be materially increased and the needed amount assured by tremendous attendance. A race with these three turf stars competing would attract a crowd that would fill all the space any of the local tracks could reserve for it. If held at either Aqueduct or Belmont Park a crowd of 50,000 would seem assured, and at the prices charged here that would more than provide a purse of $75,000 or $100,000.

The local racing associations might well seize an opportunity like this one to bolster up their Autumn campaign, which is not gaining any ground against the opposition of the Maryland tracks. Already many of the best horses have been shipped to Maryland because of the better purses offered there, and New York is left with the cheaper horses, though able to provide vastly larger crowds when the cards are sufficiently attractive, as has been shown repeatedly this year.

The local racing associations have this year enjoyed greater success than for many seasons past, and, while they may not be able to compete with the mutuel machine tracks in the matter of daily purses, it seems that they should not be outbid for a race which will probably be talked about throughout the lifetime of present day racegoers. Mr. Riddle, Commander Ross and W. S. Kilmer, the last named the owner of Exterminator, depend on the New York tracks through the greater part of the racing season for the purses that are won by their horses, and would probably give this city the preference in the proposed race, the financial inducements being sufficient.

TENNIS

That the committee of the United States lawn Tennis Association made no mistake in its selection of the team to challenge Australia for the Davis Cup is the practically universal belief of tennis followers. There never was any question anyway as to the proper challengers in the singles. As a result of the Wimbledon and Davis Cup matches in England this Summer, every American believes, with good basis for his belief, that William T. Tilden, 2d., and William M. Johnston are capable of defeating any other players in the world in singles. Not Patterson nor O'Hara Wood nor any other Australian save perhaps Norman Brookes at his best could seriously hope to defeat the world's champion or the man who stands second to him.

But it is different in the doubles. It is conceivable that Brookes may so far have recovered form when the Davis Cup matches are played in December as to upset either of the Americans in singles and that the final test may rest in the doubles. In that case, the problem of opposition to Brookes and Patterson, champions of America in 1919 but who did not defend this year, would be important. However, in the choice of Tilden, Johnston and Williams for the American team, there is the making of a doubles combination likely to beat even Brookes and Patterson at their palmiest.

Tilden and Johnston had their troubles in winning their way through the Davis Cup matches in England this Summer against the British representatives, Parke and Kingscote, but they did it. Excellence of individual play decided the issue. The same pair had less difficulty in conquering the Frenchmen. They are probably doubtless the strongest pair in any pair in the world. On the other hand, Tilden and Williams demonstrated in the East-West matches in Philadelphia that they could beat the national champions, Johnston and Griffin. Tilden and Williams, in fact, in the opinion of many who saw the Philadelphia matches, form the greatest doubles combination, potentially, in the world, Johnston and Williams have seldom been paired. They did play through a tournament in England together after the Davis Cup matches and won the event, but the opposition was not of the best.

However, in any event, it will be safe to leave the decision as to the doubles combination in the hands of Captain Samuel Hardy. Captain Hardy bore a part in America's temporary triumph in England this Summer that has not yet received its due recognition. The only worries the players had were in actual competition. Every matter of management was handled by Hardy in the most efficient manner, and the same will be true in the case of the Australian invasion. Incidentally, if emergency arises, Captain Hardy could fill in in the doubles himself with the utmost credit. He is one of the best doubles players in the country.

BOXING

Boxing has come back with a bang. The sport which has sustained so much abuse is once again established as a legalized form of entertainment in this State. Unless all signs fail, it will have great success under the almost idealistic plans which have been adopted for its control and conduct and for the purpose of eliminating those who in the past have done the sport more harm than good.

It remains for the officials intrusted with the duty of supervision to see that boxing is accorded the high plane warranted under present circumstances. Senator Walker reasons that if baseball can be safely promoted for the enjoyment of the public, the same process should be possible for the manly art. Heretofore the yawning gap between the two sports has been largely due to an immense difference between the persons controlling the two forms of recreation. There will doubtless be an improvement with regard to boxing which will be both welcome and wholesome.

Red-blooded citizens want pugilistic encounters, but they want them cleansed of the sinister influences of the past. The process will be carried out under the Walker law if its provisions are strictly and sternly enforced, as the License Committee and the Boxing Commission appear intent upon doing.

The well-staged opening bouts held here afforded additional evidence that the sport has an attraction enjoyed by no other indoor athletic activity. This very popularity in the past has been responsible for attracting to the sport undesirable, objectionable creatures whose every thought was of self, much to the detriment of the ring game. There seems little likelihood of these destroyers returning under the Walker law.

That football has reached the stage where its code of rules is adequate and satisfactory seems to be indicated by the fact that the rulemakers have found it necessary to make no important changes. None of the modifications for the 1920 season will affect the game as far as the spectator is concerned, and the changes may be taken as merely the development of a policy adopted many years ago.

What changes have been made will, if anything, strengthen the use of the forward pass and the skilled modern game. Roughing the forward passer after he has made the pass will be illegal, and consequently the aerial attack will be made even more attractive. The abolishment of the puntout will result in opening out the play within the 25-yard line. No quarter back will now hesitate to use a trick formation that may carry the ball to a remote corner of the field because after a touchdown, no matter where it is made, the try for goal will be made from a spot directly in front of the goal posts. We may expect, as a result of this rule, a greater variety of play in the shadow of the goal posts, instead of the safe and cautious jockeying that has been the rule in years past. A touchdown is now a touchdown, and the try for goal following it will hardly be more than a formality.

The coming season promises to see even greated development of the forward pass, the shift and the unusual and trick formation. Yale, for instance, which adhered stanchly last year to old-style tactics, has thrown tradition overboard and, with Tad Jones and the energetic Tim Callahan at the helm, has embarked upon the newer course. More and more coaches seem to be stressing straight football. The fine edge of his game was worn down, and he did not quite do himself justice against the elongated Brooklynite. Nevertheless, he put up a splendid battle, yielding only after a struggle that was even harder than the close scores of 6–3, 7–5 indicate. Hewetson convinced all who watched his play that his game has almost unlimited possibilities.

P. L. Kynaston, the Nassau and Queens County champion, won his second and third round matches in straight sets, and will meet George G. Moore, the Seventh Regiment expert, in the fourth round today. Dr. William Rosenbaum, who was runner-up to Throckmorton, last year's winner, advanced through three rounds without raising a racquet, by virtue of a bye and two defaults. Throckmorton also drew a bye and a default.

Today's Feature Matches.

Another of today's feature matches, in addition to the Kynaston-Moore battle, will bring Joseph W. Fox, the steady Harlem Tennis Club expert, against Fred C. Anderson, while Alfred D. Hammett, the chop stroke specialist of the University Heights Club, will meet Kenneth D. Fischer of Staten Island.

Play in the women's singles will start this afternoon with an entry list numbering twenty-two. Miss Helene Pollak won the event last year, and she is drawn against Miss R. Christy this afternoon. Another important match today will bring Mrs. E. V. Lynch against Mrs. S. Wolff, both players having returned to New York after their excellent week's work in the women's national tournament at Philadelphia. Miss Marie Wagner, Mrs. Ingo Hartmann and Mrs. D. C. Mills are other prominent contestants for the women's laurels. The summaries:

TILDEN IN TENNIS TIE.

Johnson Takes Set from Champion in Exhibition Match.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—Several members of the Davis Cup team, including William T. Tilden, Jr., world's tennis champion, played exhibition matches here today before a large crowd.

Tilden and Wallace F. Johnson, national semi-finalist and Pennsylvania State champion, divided a two-set singles match, Johnson winning the first set, 9–7, and Tilden the second, 11–9.

Tilden and Johnson also were opponents in two sets of doubles. Paired with Samuel Hardy, captain of the Davis Cup team, Tilden defeated Johnson and Stanley W. Pearson, Philadelphia champion, 6–4 in the first set. Johnson and Pearson won the second set, 19–17.

TWENTY SURVIVORS IN HOBOKEN TENNIS

Van Vliet Scores Victory Over Vandeventer as Fourth Round Is Reached.

Excellent progress was made yesterday in the Hoboken Tennis Club's tournament at Castle Point, the 105 entries who started having been reduced to twenty survivors as the result of two days' activity. Thirty-four matches were completed yesterday on the club's five courts, the committee keeping the players hustling to such good effect that ten of them reached the fourth round.

The last important match of yesterday afternoon ended in a finely earned victory for Captain R. C. Van Vliet, Hoboken's favorite and champion tennis expert. He defeated Philip Vandeventer in a hot three-set encounter, scored 7–5, 2–6, 6–1, in which the play was fast from start to finish. Van Vliet assumed the aggressive at all stages and was at his best in volleying and overhead. In the final sets, two or three lucky netcorders helped the winner, but he would have gained the decision in any event through the swiftness and force of his strokes and his ability to manoeuvre his opponent out of position. Vincent Richards, who was considered to have an excellent chance of winning the tournament, defaulted to A. L. Bruneau.

The real star of the day was a newcomer in local tennis, who, though finally defeated by the Brooklyn expert, Fred C. Anderson, made an unusually fine impression. This was Henry Hewetson, who recently won the championship of Toronto, Ontario. Hewetson is a Bayonne, N. J., man who entered the Canadian Air Service during the war and has since made his home in Canada. He is in New York on a visit, and entered the first tournament available. Following his defeat of Gerald Emerson, a hard man to beat, in the first round, by polishing off the match at love in the third set, Hewetson won in straight sets, 6–0, 12–10, from J. A. Magee, a Baltimore man who plays an admirable game.

Uses Backcourt Tactics.

Hewetson is an excellent net player, but he is a trifle out of practice, and he stuck mainly to the safety of backcourt tactics yesterday. In the opening set of his match with Emerson he made something of an exception to his rule in this respect, and fairly smothered the Staten Island expert in consequence. Emerson improved his game in the second set, while his opponent became more conservative, and the result shows in the score of the final sets. In defeating Magee in the curiously scored match at 6–0, 12–10, Hewetson again started aggressively, and ended with tactics more or less defensive. He exhibited an astonishingly effective backhand, highly useful as an offensive weapon. His one weakness was on service.

In tackling Fred Anderson for his third match of the day, the Canadian took a bit too much of a burden upon himself, however. The fine edge of his game was worn down, and he did not quite do himself justice against the elongated Brooklynite. Nevertheless, he put up a splendid battle, yielding only after a struggle that was even harder than the close scores of 6–3, 7–5 indicate. Hewetson convinced all who watched his play that his game has almost unlimited possibilities.

P. L. Kynaston, the Nassau and Queens County champion, won his second and third round matches in straight sets, and will meet George G. Moore, the Seventh Regiment expert, in the fourth round today. General Public Barred from Football Workouts at Penn

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—The general public will be barred at all times from Franklin Field while the University of Pennsylvania football team is practicing this Fall, according to orders that have been issued by Coach John Heisman, new Red and Blue gridiron mentor. Students with proper credentials will be allowed to watch the workouts on Mondays and Thursdays, although the coach has issued no definite instructions barring them at other times. However, he has requested the undergraduates to keep away from the field except on the specified days. The only exceptions in the new scheme of secrecy will be made for members of the Board of Trustees, ex-Penn football men with "Varsity Club buttons and newspaper men. These three classes of spectators will be welcome at all times, Coach Heisman said.

FOOTBALL CAPTAIN QUITS AT CORNELL

Full Back Shuler Not to Return Because of Being Placed on Probation.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Cornell 'Varsity football prospects sustained a blow today with the written announcement by John Shuler, captain-elect and fullback, that he will not return to school this year. Schuler gave as his reason disappointment at the treatment which he declares was accorded him by the faculty of the College of Arts and Sciences, by whom he was placed on probation because of his work last term.

Schuler's home is in Davenport, Iowa. He entered the university in the Fall of 1916 and made the freshman team, but left school to enter the Navy, in which he served during the war. He returned to school last Fall and played fullback on the 'Varsity eleven during the season. At the close of the season he was elected captain to succeed Shiverick, who graduated this year.

HIGH PRICES FOLLOW TRUST DISSOLUTIONS

WRITER REVIEWS CASES

Holds Sherman Law, as Now Applied, Breaks Up the Good, Leaves the Evil in Combinations.

"Coal and beef are prominent among the articles which cost more and more from week to week," says Paul Clay, writing in Forbes Review, "and, the public naturally wonders what are the reasons for the persistent rise in prices.

"Upon the basis of the popular belief that high prices are due to the trusts, hard coal and beef are the very articles which ought to have gone down, because the coal and beef 'trusts' have just been dissolved. The Supreme Court on April 26 this year ordered the dissolution of the Reading Holding Company for flagrant violation of the anti-trust laws. On Feb. 28 the meat 'trust' was dissolved; for on that date the Attorney General filed the packers' agreement in the Supreme Court, under which the big meat packers are barred forever from the retail meat business and from the so-called unrelated lines, including wholesale groceries, canned goods and the like.

"We have thus witnessed this year the dissolution of two great 'trusts,' and coal and meat represent important parts of the total cost of living. Considering, also, that the oil, tobacco and railroad 'trusts' and many minor combinations were long ago dissolved, it becomes more and more difficult for the layman to understand why the cost of living does not go down. He becomes the more mystified in view of the fact that the Federal Trade Commission, which was created for the very purpose of overseeing, regulating and curbing trusts, has been very busy, indeed.

"Nevertheless, the cost of living, and especially the prices of the articles taken out of the hands of the trusts, have gone higher and higher. They were doing so even before the war rise began. How the policy of trust-wrecking works may best be judged by a few of the most important cases.

Oil and Tobacco Dissolutions.

"Foremost among these was that of Standard Oil, which was ordered into dissolution by the Supreme Court on May 15, 1911. The public believed that Standard Oil was artificially maintaining the prices of petroleum and its products, and that its dissolution would bring about a great decline. On the contrary, nothing of the kind happened, and it is easy to see why it did not happen. At the time the dissolution decree was handed down, the wholesale New York price of kerosene oil as quoted by Bradstreet's was 7.25 cents per gallon. It is now more than four times that amount. Even before the war rise took place it was 8.75 to 9 cents per gallon.

"In the two years following the dissolution kerosene prices went up 25 per cent., and the quotations of other petroleum products made similar advances, whereas commodity prices generally went up only about 7 per cent. Otherwise expressed, oil products when taken out of the hands of the 'trust' advanced three or four times as fast as other commodities, and they did so in spite of the fact that our output of crude petroleum increased from 220,449,091 barrels in 1911 to 248,448,230 in 1913. The average price of crude petroleum at the well for seven big oil fields in the United States advanced from 85 cents to $1.34 in January, 1914, a gain of almost 58 per cent.

"The tobacco 'trust' was dissolved May 29, 1911. From that date to the middle of January, 1913, ten leading grades of tobacco as quoted by Dun's Review rose from 8.75 cents per pound to 10.95c., gaining 12.3 per cent. in price in about a year and a half. The 1913 farm price, meaning the average figure received by the tobacco growers, was 12.8 cents, against 9.4 for 1911; and the 1913 average import price of tobacco leaf suitable for cigarette wrappers was $1.28 per pound, against 97.6c cents for 1910. Yet such were the changes in the qualities and prices of finished tobacco products that the tobacco companies after paying these higher costs immensely added to their own profits. The public, of course, paid the bill.

"Following the dissolution of the meat 'trust' by Attorney General Palmer in February of the present year, meat prices straightway began to rise. We have the Government's own record on the subject, prepared by the Bureau of Labor. These relate to retail prices, and the averages of March 15 are the latest thus far available. During the month ended on that date meat prices moved as follows at retail: Sirloin steak, up 0.4%; round steak, up 1.0%; rib roast, up 1.0%; plate beef, down 1.0%; pork chops, up 4.0%; bacon, down 0.2%; ham, up 1.0%; lamb, up 2.0%.

"During the first month after the wrecking of the meat trust the average retail price of meat went up about 1 per cent. At wholesale beef is now about 25 per cent. higher than before dissolution and pork 6 per cent. higher.

"The same experience was had in the case of the harvester 'trust.' In 1913, by way of complying with the Sherman law, the International Harvester Company segregated its foreign and domestic business, placing each in the hands of a separate company. In August, 1914, a decision was given against the company in the United States Court. To be sure, there was no complete dissolution in 1914, but there was the splitting up of the business. Forthwith the prices on all agricultural implements began to boom. Of course, this rise was due mostly to the war and to the high prices of steel; but we must attribute it in part to the freer play of the law of supply and demand brought about by the enforcement of the Sherman law.

"As a matter of fact, American 'trusts' before the war were not price-boosters but price-regulators. Instead of advancing prices to unusual levels they strove mainly to keep them from fluctuating violently. If prices became too weak they reduced production and sustained them, and on the other hand, whenever prices began to soar they increased production and drew upon their stocks of goods for sale and kept them from rising too much. This policy of theirs was due not to philanthropic regard to the public welfare but to a good, sound self-interest, or what one might call a wise selfishness.

"Dissolves the Good, Leaves the Evil."

"There is also a political reason why they did not boost prices. They stood constantly in fear of the Sherman law and of dissolution, and did not want to bring down upon themselves the wrath of the public and the politicians. Thus it was that the trend of petroleum and its products was steadily downward from the day the Sherman law was passed until Standard Oil was dissolved. The law was a fine thing for the public, so long as it was merely held in reserve as a safeguard against price-boosting; but the moment it began to be used to break up so-called 'trusts' merely because they were too big, prices began to soar.

"'Trust' dissolutions fail because they dissolve nothing but the sense of responsibility toward the public and the stability of prices. They leave the given industry where it has full power to prevent violent declines in prices, but no obligation to prevent violent rises. The pieces of a broken 'trust' are still held somewhat together and kept in harmony by the common interests of the wealthy stockholders of each company, and this common interest prevents and always will prevent cut-throat competition.

"Admittedly there is no reason in the world why the Sherman law should not be a splendid thing. Until it was used against mere bigness rather than against price boosting it was a public benefit. But it dissolves the good in 'trusts' and permits the evil to remain. Practically its present application means that we must expect permanently higher prices than would otherwise be the case, especially for coal and meat. This is also true in a lesser degree of petroleum and tobacco products. The more 'trusts' we dissolve the more we shall raise the cost of living. Our politicians for the last fifteen years have been using the Sherman law, or rather misusing it, against mere bigness instead of against profiteering, and so long as they are permitted to continue doing this the public will have to pay the bill."

$1,000,455 FOR AID OF POOR.

New York Association's Budget Largest in Its History.

The expenditure of $1,000,455 for carrying on the work of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor during next year is foreshadowed in a budget to be submitted this afternoon to a special meeting of the Executive and Finance Committees by Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., President of the association. This budget, the largest in the history of the organization, will be placed before the annual meeting of the association on Oct. 27 for formal adoption.

It was said yesterday that by the end of this month, when the organization's fiscal year ends, the association will have spent $859,722 for the last year's operating expenses. The advance to the proposed budget figures, it was explained, was made necessary by an increase of 40 to 45 cents in daily allowances for food per individual under the organization's care and an increase of from 40 to 50 cents allowance in the case of tubercular patients.

Other items of increase are accounted for chiefly by the advance in the cost of rent for families and the necessaries of life for these families, and also by the increased cost of maintaining the association's health work. It was pointed out by Bailey B. Burritt, General Director, that the increase is a normal one and is not accounted for by any radical extension of the activities of the association.

Favorable Outlook For Railroad and Hydro-Electric Bonds

The outlook for bonds of the above types appears particularly bright. The railroads, through the recent advance in freight and passenger rates, should ultimately increase their net revenues materially. Hydro-electric companies, because of their independence from coal, and their low operating costs, should become more and more essential to industries dependent upon cheap power, and their bonds should show a corresponding increase in intrinsic value. In our circular, "Conservative Investments," we mention a number of attractive railroad and hydro-electric bonds to yield from about 6% to 7½%.

Long Term Railroad Bonds

High grade long time railroad issues can be purchased today to yield a return higher than has been obtainable in any previous year for more than a generation. The enactment of the Transportation Act of 1920, followed by the increase in rates granted by the Interstate Commerc Commission, has greatly clarified and strengthened the railroad situation. We recommend to investors the purchase at this time of long time railroad bonds.

FINANCIAL SITUATION

Money Appears Easier and Stocks Advance—Political News Helpful.

Stocks have been going up the last few days, money has had the appearance of being easier, and "sentiment," that indefinable something which is supposed to have so much to do with the course of the stock market, unquestionably is improving. Two weeks ago there were a good many doubters of the market's ability to rise; one week ago there were not so many, and at the close of last week there were very few. And there can be no doubt that professional sentiment, in a market as narrow as the one we have been having and are likely to continue having for some little time to come, plays an important part. The men whose business it is to buy and sell stocks may be of slight consequence in times of real market activity, but in times of relative dullness they can accomplish quite a lot.

Whether this improved feeling will be communicated to the outside public with sufficient force to attract that public into the market is another matter, and if this does not happen it is difficult to believe that the professionals, alone and unaided, can sustain anything even remotely resembling a bull market. But if only a comparatively small portion of the public is attracted on the long side the chances are that prices will continue to rise for the next few weeks. There were some slight evidences of an outside interest the closing days of last week, and it is not improbable that with money coming down, as it surely is for the time being, there will be more this present week.

But the speculation is more likely to be spotty than general. In the industrial list the oil shares continue to hold their own and the appetite for securities of this classification does not appear to be abating. The steel stocks always have a certain following, and the equipments, assuming that the Interstate Commerce Commission will shortly become more lenient in the matter of permitting the railroads to meet the money market for the purposes of replenishing their rolling stock, should receive some advertising which may be helpful marketwise. Then there are the specialties. Whenever the public comes in, no matter how lightly, there are specialties which are bought.

As far as the railroad department is concerned, the action of the market on Friday, and again on Saturday's short session, augurs well for the immediate future. A rumor, not substantiated by anything or anybody of the slightest responsibility, to the effect that Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, as part of its reorganization scheme, was to take in Erie and Nickel Plate, sent the two latter stocks shooting upward. The psychology of this was plain. Wall Street, along with the rest of the country, has been talking of "regional mergers" ever since the new railroad legislation was first suggested. After the legislation became law there was more talk, but all of it was vague and none of it got anywhere. However, the idea stuck.

Now comes a suggestion which, on the face of it, appears logical, if one does not care to analyze it too closely. Furthermore, there is the chance that something may come of it. D., L. & W. may not absorb Erie—there would be a good many surprised persons if it did—but something of the sort may be worked out in the general scheme of rehabilitating the carriers, and something else may be worked out for other railroad combinations. At all events, Wall Street is likely to hear many rumors of railroad mergers, and by the same token, if it does it is likely to see a more or less hectic railroad list. It will make for market activity, if only for a little while, and after the long period of dullness, which has lasted for the better part of ten months now, Wall Street will be profoundly thankful for any turn for the better, no matter how brief.

The money market is a puzzle. Last week, with a big turnover on Wednesday, there was not a ripple on the surface of the money market, although great movements were going on underneath. Time funds, which still were scarce, eased quotably, and money brokers were inclined to the belief that even the lower quotations were artificially high, taking into consideration the extremely light demand for accommodation for the fixed periods. Call money, of course, was plentiful, as was to be expected, for the tax payment checks always are slow in being cleared and the banks usually have the use of funds for several days longer than otherwise would be the case. But why time money should be easier at this particular stage of the Fall is not clear. The peak of the crop moving season should be at least a fortnight off, with the December demand still to be reckoned with, and the week-end bank statements indicated that the interior still is drawing heavily on New York, as witness the Reserve Bank's huge loss through the settlement fund. Why, then, is money coming down? Perhaps it is because business is slowing down more rapidly than was generally supposed. The bank clearings and other barometers indicate that some contraction has taken place, but hardly enough to make much difference in the demand for funds. Also, the Federal Reserve Banks still are lending heavily to member banks. But the fact remains that the money market last week did show a notably easier tone, and many competent judges were convinced that at last the corner had been turned.

Foreign exchanges were extremely weak in the early part of the period, but experienced a sharp recovery before the close. Sterling, losing 5 cents in the pound the first two days, turned and moved up nearly 10 cents before the close, and the allied Continentals were in brisk demand at rising prices on Friday and Saturday. Paris, Brussels and Genoa bills all were strong and at the close were well above where they closed the previous week. Part of this recovery, beyond doubt, was due to the more favorable reports of European social conditions, and as for French francs in particular, it looked as if the accumulation of dollars through the exchange market which the Ministry of Finance has been reported to be engaging in, as part of the program for liquidating the Anglo-French loan, had about been completed. The importation of considerable amounts of French gold, in this respect, should have very little effect on the exchanges; not nearly so much, it is likely, as it will have on the American money market.

The election returns from Maine stimulated market activity to no small extent on Tuesday, and there were traces of this later in the week. Wall Street, or at least the major portion of it, is frankly Republican, and the surprisingly large plurality rolled up by that party in the Maine elections was accepted as an omen of what is to happen in November. There have been plenty of predictions that the market would begin to rise "as soon as people realize that the Republicans are going to win," and after Tuesday's news these predictions were repeated and, what is more, were followed materially. Similarly, the lengthening of the betting odds on Senator Harding has been featured in more than a few market letters, and it is not improbable that some few purchases of stocks have followed.

A Sound Financial Condition

There are 1,100 members of the New York Stock Exchange. The average of business failures among them during the past ten years is less than ½ of 1% per annum. Half of these settled with their creditors and were reinstated, reducing the absolute failures to ¼ of 1%. This percentage is lower than that of any other business, including national banking.

This reveals a high degree of business ability and honesty among Exchange members and suggests the desirability of conducting security transactions with firms where risk is reduced to a minimum.

Oils and Automobiles

During the year 1919 there were 7,558,800 automobiles registered in the United States. Of this number about 750,000 were trucks. Naturally it might be assumed that the market was beginning to be limited, but the same report went on to state that the outlook for 1920 was that 2,425,000 cars would be sold, of which 425,000 would be trucks, and an increase to 3,000,000 more was expected for 1921. If these figures prove true, it would mean that 12,000,000 cars would be registered in the United States by December 31, 1921, or about one for every 12 persons.

This calls for more gasoline and should inspire serious consideration for further economy per car consumption.

SLASH CITY BUDGET, HYLAN DEMANDS

Urges Fellow-Members of Estimate Board to Prevent "Tremendous Increases."

FEARS A HIGHER TAX RATE

He Declares Additional State Burdens Entitle Public Here to Relief.

Mayor Hylan yesterday made public a letter addressed to each member of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, calling upon all of them to co-operate "in an effort to put a check upon the demands for tremendous increases in the 1921 budget, as approval of the appropriations requested would mean a budget in excess of the constitutional limit."

He declares that a "higher budget means a higher tax rate," and adds that he believes taxpayers are entitled to relief, especially since the State has imposed additional burdens upon them. This is the Mayor's letter:

City of New York,
Office of the Mayor.
Sept. 18, 1920.

Dear Sir: The responsibility for the new budget rests upon the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, which appropriates the money required for the various activities of the city government. As Chairman of the board, I am asking your co-operation in an effort to put a check upon the demands for tremendous increases in the 1921 budget, as approval of the appropriations requested would mean a budget in excess of the constitutional limit.

There has been a wild scramble for unlimited appropriations. No regard has apparently been had for the resulting burden upon the taxpayers. It behooves every member of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to give prompt attention to the many large requests made.

A higher budget means a higher tax rate, and the taxpaying community is entitled to some relief. The Legislature, through mandatory legislation, has added many millions to the load borne by the taxpayers. No blame attaches to the city government and it shares no responsibility for the financial burden imposed by mandatory legislation. There is, however, an obligation resting upon us to see that the staggering burdens placed upon the taxpayers are not increased through lack of economy in the expenditure of the funds over which we exercise control. We will spend the city's money wisely if all requests are scrutinized closely and approval given only in the order of their relative need. An inflated budget cannot result if this insistent attention be given by all responsible officials.

I am absolutely confident that you have the best interests of the city at heart and are keenly alive to the necessity of saving the city's money through economy of administration. As I am but one member of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, there is need of your fullest help and support if the problem of the rapidly mounting budget is to be successfully attacked, and the budget for 1921 reduced to the minimum consistent with effective municipal administration.

Very truly yours,
JOHN F. HYLAN, Mayor.

The members of the board, in addition to the Mayor, are the Controller, the President of the Board of Aldermen and the five Borough Presidents.

MINE FIREMEN BARRED; OTHERS REMAIN OUT

Suspension of Work in the Shamokin District Is Expected to be Prolonged.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Sept. 19.—Evidence that the suspension of mining in the Shamokin district will be prolonged was given today when fire bosses, who were discharged at the inception of the suspension three weeks ago for refusing to man the pumps and fire boilers, were barred from their old positions. The miners declare they will not return to work until every man's former position is given back to him.

Firemen, pumpmen, hoisting engineers and electricians all returned to work today, mules were lowered into the mines wherever water conditions were not too adverse, and other preparations were made for the resumption of work tomorrow. However, the men have voted to remain out until after their meeting Wednesday and unless all men are taken back by that time will continue their "vacation," leaders said tonight.

The men in the Mount Carmel district met Saturday night and they voted to return to woork Monday morning.

HYLAN CALLS PHONE RATE RISE GOUGING

Orders Official Protest to Public Service Commission, and Requests Hearing.

CITES COMPANY'S FINANCES

It Has $41,400,000 Reserve and Depreciation Fund of $51,152,000, the Mayor Says.

Official protest of the city against the proposed telephone rate increases on the ground that they are "unwarranted and unjustified" was ordered yesterday by Mayor Hylan in a letter to John P. O'Brien, the Corporation Counsel. In his letter, ordering the protest filed with the Public Service Commission, the Mayor wrote:

City of New York
Office of the Mayor, Sept. 18, 1920.

Hon. John P. O'Brien,
Corporation Counsel.

Dear Sir: The New York Telephone Company has made application to the Public Service Commission for substantial increases in telephone rates and for more exacting terms in the contracts for telephone usage.

I am informed that this company's rates have been greatly excessive in the past and that last year it was required to reduce its rates for the City of New York. I also understand that the company has in recent years to a large extent made its extensions to plant and service out of revenues collected from the consumers and not from the investments by stockholders. Large amounts have been added each year to surplus. In 1914 the surplus was reported as $23,000,000, while for 1918, the latest public available figures, the surplus stood at $41,400,000.

Besides the fact that its surplus has been practically doubled in four years, the company's depreciation reserve has been increased from $25,500,000 in 1914 to $51,135,000 in 1918.

During these years in spite of the large amounts for depreciation which have not been needed for actual renewals of plant and equipment, and in spite of the large additions to surplus contributed by the consumers, the company has been paying 8 per cent. dividends on its capital stock outstanding vesides the interest on its bonded debt.

In view of these large earnings and profits of the company every effort should be made at once to prevent this attempted gouging of the public on pretended plea of necessity. I wish you would make immediate complaint to the Public Service Commission against this unwarranted and unjustified increase and demand a public hearing at the earliest possible moment, taking such steps as the circumstances require to protect the people of this city.

Very truly yours,
JOHN F. HYLAN,
Mayor.

Corporation O'Brien announced that his office would take action immediately in accordance with the wishes of the Mayor.

RESTORE BRIDGEPORT CARS.

Service to be Resumed Today After Jitney Dispute.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 19.—After a cessation of service lasting eight weeks the Connecticut company will resume the operations of its street cars in this city tomorrow morning. Superintendent Frank L. Kibling states that virtually all of the company's former employes are now registered on the payroll.

The operation of jitney bus service, which caused the suspension of the electric cars, will be restricted to other than the main thoroughfares, beginning Monday, as a result of an ordinance passed by the Common Council on Sept. 7. Bus association leaders stated that they would continue to run on the routes laid out for them. Violation of the ordinance is punishable by a fine of $100 for each offense.

It was stated by the jitney men that petitions would be presented to the Common Council Monday night asking for the restoration of motor bus service to those districts which will not be served by their cars under the new ruling.

"National Chronicler" for Spain.

MADRD, Sept. 18.—José Ortega Nunilla, a prominent Spanish newspaperman and former Director of El Imparcial, has been awarded the title of "National Chronicler," which is akin to that of Literary Laureate. Senor Ortega Nunilla is an Academician and has written in favor of closer relations with South America.

ROADS ORDER RAILS BUT FEW NEW CARS

Steel District Mills Look for Demands Totaling 1,500,000 Tons for Track Repairs.

TIN AND WIRE IN DEMAND

Auto Makers and Some Others Continue to Cancel or Suspend Orders, but Effect Is Negligible.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 18.—The principal new business before the steel mills is in rails. Only a few roads are represented thus far, the largest two inquiries being one of 100,000 tons for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and one of 120,000 tons for the Santa Fé. Orders placed with the United States Steel Corporation prior to the present inquiry total over 200,000 tons. For the entire season of 1921 the railroads will probably require about 1,500 000 tons of rails for replacement purposes, but the tonnage may run above or below this amount, according to the prices asked. For fifteen years, up to 1916, rails stood at the same price.

Railroads are showing little disposition to place additional contracts for new cars and locomotives, but are still having a great deal of repair work done. The heaviest buying of cars and locomotives occurred in February, March and April. Orders placed to date this year total about 2,200 locomotives and 70,000 freight cars. Many of the latter were bought by private interests, while a few were bought for export. Apart from cancellations of steel orders, there are some instructions to suspend shipments for a time, particularly in sheets for the automobile trade. In no important case however, has the rate of mill operation been reduced by cancellations or suspensions.

Pressure for deliveries against existing contracts is heaviest in wire nails, tin plate and the smaller sizes of merchant steel bars. On the larger sizes of steel bars some mills offer shipment in two or three weeks, there being a great difference between the larger and the smaller sizes. In structural shapes demand is extremely light. Plate demand is the smallest experienced for some time. One or two mills that recently advanced their asking price on plates from $3.25 to $3.50 are again willing to sell at the lower figure. The Steel Corporation continues to sell at $2.65.

The Connellsville coke market continues downward, and most buyers in the past week have been able to fill their requirements in spot coke at $16.50, or at about $2 a ton below the top price reached a few weeks ago. A large interest is offering first half furnace coke to regular customers at $14, but does not seem to have met any response.

As to Eastern pig iron, the common attitude of consumers seems to be that the market has reached top level at last and that the next change will be downward. There is scarcely any inquiry for prompt foundry iron, while in basic there is no inquiry, and in Bessemer the only inquiry of note this week was for a thousand tons of first quarter. Prices are maintained with absolute firmness at recently established levels, as follows: Bessemer, $44.50; basic, $48.50; foundry, $50; malleable, $50. These prices are free on board Valley furnaces, freight to Pittsburg being $1.96.

The unanimity with which the plate mills have lately been adhering to a 3.50c quotation has been broken; there are recognized sellers at 3.25c. The recent advance from 3.25c to 3.50c was practically a paper advance, the procedure being that of the mills that had been selling at 3.25c putting their price up to 3.50c, as they saw no demand nor any advantage in having a quotation of 3.25c open when buyers were not interested. A few little lots of plates have been sold lately at 3.25c, although their official quotation remains at 3.50c.

Pressure continues unabated for deliveries of merchant steel bars in the smaller sizes. Several of the larger mills compute that they are already sold up for the remainder of the year on the smaller sizes, with regular customers, on the basis of customers taking bars at the same rate as formerly. The market generally speaking, may be quoted at 3c to 3.50c, but the lower price is chiefly a settling price between certain large independents and their regular customers. Open market quotations run up to 4c.

The tin plate market is variously described by different producers. Some, with order books not well filled, explain that demand is very light. Others, well filled with contract business, describe the situation as one involving considerable demand, which, however, is in the form of pressure for deliveries against contracts. A common asking price in the market is $9, as against the Industrial Board and Steel Corporation price of $7. All the corporation business in the domestic market has been done at $7, while the independents, at the regular contracting season, met this price as far as it seemed necessary to do so, not a few contracts having been put through at somewhat higher figures. Some of the independents have expressed hopes that the market for the first half of the new year would be established at $9, but this seems altogether improbable, since the Steel Corporation shows no disposition to advance prices above the Industrial Board level.

The general quietness in the finished steel market has affected the merchant steel barn, in which only recently there was considerable excitement on account of scarcity of the smaller sizes, resulting in high prices for early delivery. Most of the mills have pegged their asking prices at the highest figures attained, and are indisposed to enter into competition as long as they have any of the high-priced business on their books. One of the larger producers still adheres to 4c as its quotation, while another has a price of 3.70c. Some mills have a price of 3c, while the Steel Corporation's price remains at 2.35c. The Corporation's delivery expectations on new business are somewhat shorter than they were a month ago.

There is only a very slight declining tendency in the general average of the sheet market, to be observed only in the outside prices. The extreme prices of a week or two ago have disappeared, while the mills that were obtaining less than the extreme prices are getting as high prices as formerly. The ordinary market for reasonably early deliveries may be quoted at 8c for black and 8.75c for galvanized. The average of all sales is, of course, below these limits. The American Sheet and Tin Plate Company has not opened its books yet for the next period. Its prices are 4.35c on black and 5.70c on galvanized, with no signs that these prices are to be advanced for the first half of 1921. Sheet mill operations continue to improve gradually, deliveries showing improvement each week. Operations by the leading interest and independents this week were at 85 per cent. of capacity.

Requirements of the automobile makers show a steady decline, and only a few of the larger interests are working at capacity. Some are working nearly full, but most of them are far below normal. Shipments have been suspended by a number of automobile interests, according to word received at the sheet mills.

Quotations on most grades of scrap are off 50 cents to $1 in the week, and thus the scrap market is running true to form, for it has been a quiet one and as a rule prices tend to sag off from time to time when there are no definite developments of a supporting character. Pittsburgh mills have bought No. 1 railroad wrought in the past week at $32 as an outside figure, and dealers do not bid as much, so it is quoted at $31 to $32. While there has been continued improvement in railroad conditions generally, shipping conditions in scrap are still distinctly unsatisfactory.

INCREASED WHEAT CROP IN THREE COUNTRIES

ROME, Sept. 18.—Estimates of the wheat crops of Argentina, South Africa and Australia show those countries, which comprise 92 per cent. of the wheat growing area of the Southern Hemisphere, will produce 28 per cent. more wheat in 1920 than in 1919. In quality the grain will be 2 per cent. above the average, it is said.

These figures have been deduced by the International Institute of Agriculture, and are included in a bulletin showing crop conditions in many countries.

Crops in Spain, Italy, Algeria, Tunis, Bulgaria, Finland, Switzerland, British India and Guatemala are about the same as last year, the bulletin says, while wheat is above the average in Austria, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, France, Holland and Sweden. The average in Germany and Ireland is slightly lower than that in England and Scotland.

Rye is good in Austria, Holland and Sweden, but is below the average in Germany, Czechoslovakia and Poland.

Preliminary estimates of the area seeded to wheat in Argentina show it to be 7 per cent. larger, but the condition of the crop is 3 per cent. below the average.

FREIGHT MOVEMENT SHOWS NO DECREASE

INCREASE IN CAR ORDERS

Gains Made in Average Mileage, but Shortage Persists — Efficiency of Roads Improved, Says Railway Age.

The latest statistics regarding the amount of freight being moved by the railroads demonstrate that there has been as yet no decline of general business activity in the United States, according to the current issue of The Railway Age. Discussing the statistics, The Age says in part:

"In the four weeks ended Aug. 28 the railways moved the largest amount of freight they had handled in any four weeks of the present year, but the amount of freight demanding movement was so great that the car shortage actually increased. The requisitions for cars made by the shippers of the United States in the week ended Sept. 4 exceeded by 146,000 the number that the railways could supply, as compared with 137,200 two weeks before. The fact that in spite of the increase in the amount of freight handled there was also an increase of the excess of orders for cars over the number that could be supplied demonstrates that there had been no slackening in general production.

"The second thing which the statistics demonstrate is that the efficiency with which the railways are being operated is still increasing. In the four weeks ended with Aug. 28 the number of carloads of freight moved by them was 3,853,822. This was 273,755 more carloads than were handled in the same weeks of 1919, and 4,196 more carloads than were handled in the same weeks of 1918. The amount of freight handled in August, 1918, was over 7 per cent. greater than had ever been handled in that month before, and therefore the railways by moving more freight in August, 1920, than in August, 1918, set a new high record for that month.

"The principal reason for the increases which are being secured in the amount of freight handled is the efforts the railway managements are making to increase the average miles moved by each car daily. Some weeks ago they set as a standard to be attained an average of thirty miles per car per day. The latest statistics regarding miles per car per day, which are those for July, show that they are steadily approaching this standard. They increased the average miles made daily by each freight car from less than twenty miles in April, 1920 when the effects of the "outlaw" strikes were being most felt, to 25.7 miles in July. This average of 25.7 miles in July, 1920 compares with an average of 21.3 miles in July, 1919.

"The railway managements may well be proud of the record of improved efficiency which they are making. The fact, however, that in spite of it the car shortage is increasing indicates that they must make still greater efforts. All signs are that the traffic to be moved this fall and Winter will be heavier than ever before."

The Federal Reserve Bank yesterday issued a warning against counterfeit $20 and $100 Federal Reserve notes discovered in circulation by Federal agents. The local Secret Service operatives described the counterfeits as follows:

"Twenty dollar Federal Reserve note on the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia; check letter 'F'; plate number indistinct, looks like 55; W. G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury; John Burke, Treasurer of the United States; portrait of Cleveland.

"One hundred dollar Federal Reserve note on the Federal Reserve Bank of New York; check letter 'B'; plate number 10; W. G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury; John Burke, Treasurer of the United States; portrait of Franklin.

"These counterfeits are printed from poorly executed photomechanical plates, on two pieces of paper, between which a few silk threads have been distributed. The small lettering and lathe work is poorly executed. The portraits of Cleveland and Franklin lack many of the fine lines of the genuine, showing white patches which should readily attract the attention of those to whom these notes are tendered.

"The notes are apparently of the same workmanship, but more care has been exercised in the printing of the 100 than of the 20."

BUILDERS ASK WHERE PRICE DROP WILL END

Material Slump Shows Big Opportunities to Building Investors.

SIXTY DAYS OF DOUBT

Immigration Only Factor Strong Enough to Make Price Cuts Permanent.

With the right perspective it is not difficult for the architect or consulting engineer to gauge with approximate correctness the present trend of building material and construction prices.

Recently there have been some price changes downward. This sudden shift was fully anticipated by the writer of these analytical reviews a year ago last August, when the trend of the building construction market was outlined as follows:

"Quotations on building materials will rule at present (1919) levels for the remainder of this year, with some factors, such as lumber, steel and cement, gradually crowding for higher pegs.

"Total construction will represent this year (1919) between 40 and 50 per cent. of normal. By the Spring of 1920 construction work will have reached between 50 and 70 per cent. of a normal year, slowing up as the Presidential election approaches its climax, continuing with decreasing activity until the Spring of 1921, when there will be a building revival of more or less artificial stimulation until the Spring of 1922.

"Much will depend upon the confidence the building investors will place in the new Administration," the 1919 analysis continues to say, "but by 1921 the condition of construction will have become so aggravated through the timidity of the professional builder and building investors, with demand even more acute than at present, and with building material supply quite inadequate to meet the demand, that prices will be at least at war levels, if, indeed, not actually beyond them."

This was not designed to be a prophecy. Conservative business men do not prophesy; they read fundamental conditions that control trade trends. The two preceding paragraphs are reproduced at this time to show to architects and students of the present chaotic condition in the building and material departments that they may read the signs of the times with equal fidelity as they are even now shaping the trend of price and construction conditions during the next year or so.

Dealers, investors, architects and engineers all ask when the price of building materials will drop to its lowest levels and whether the drop will be permanent.

Fundamental conditions throughout the entire construction and building material supply markets dictate clearly still weaker price conditions during the next sixty days. There are at least two months of doubt and disquietude ahead. The reasons are: first, the pending action of a Legislature that has already proved itself hostile to the building construction program; second, the unsettled industrial and economic conditions usually attendant upon the closing days of a Presidential election campaign.

In the meantime, manufacturers are either unable to produce building materials because they cannot get cars with which to transport raw products to them, or have been forced to close down because they cannot get sufficient cars to transport the goods when they have been manufactured. Even where cars are available the consignees do not want deliveries because the new building projects for which they were ordered have been held up indefinitely through strikes or rumors of strikes or hesitancy on the part of lending institutions to make loans in the face of such stressed conditions as now prevail.

Under such conditions, with tightened bank credits in manufacturing centres, the building material manufacturer will be inclined to make concessions on price. Lumber, clay products, linseed oil and some other commodities, notably in the equipment departments, have already shown weakness long expected under such circumstances. Others say they will not follow suit, but in times like these, where individual action is the sole choice between ruin and survival, the alternative easiest to follow is to throw what is available to sell onto the market at attractive figures.

In this distressful situation the building investor seeks his opportunity. He is retarded from sweeping in with his building plans by the hope that perhaps the price of materials will go lower, if he waits. He asks almost daily how much lower they will go and whether they are going to stay low.

In such inquiries there is revealed a timidity against a general and prolonged price break as great as that timidity which prevented him from entering the market on a price rising market.

There is only one hope for a permanent lowering of building material prices, says the current Dow Service Daily Building Reports, not from present price levels, but from price levels prevailing next Spring. That hope lies in the continued volume of immigration. Ship companies tell the Department of Labor that immigration capacity westward is taken for a whole year at the rate of many thousands a month. As basic building materials are almost entirely the product of unskilled labor, this factor is likely to have an effect upon building material production, but not for another year, at least, because fuel is also a factor in price movement.

Coal mined for next Winter will be sold on this year's costs. The 1920 building material season is already closing, and much of this year's products will go in to next year's construction. Prices will therefore carry this year's costs, which will not even be definitely known until this year ends.

Any present price reductions represent a genuine opportunity to the building investor. It is largely a period of liquidation by certain distressed holders who are pressed by tightened bank credits. It does not presage a return to pre-war price levels now.

VANISH WITH 500-LB. SAFE.

Burglars Carry Off Receptacle with $15,000 Contents.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Sept. 10.—Some time during the night burglars broke into the butcher shop of Imra Kugler, 124 Somerset Street, Raritan, and carried away a 500-pound safe containing diamonds, jewelry and currency valued at between $14,000 and $15,000. No trace of the burglars or safe has been found by the police.

The burglars entered through a rear window on the second floor, occupied by Kugler as his home. They took a gold watch from the front room and then went down to the store. In getting the safe into the yard they wrecked a wheelbarrow. They took away their booty with a horse and wagon stolen from Denato Buonono. The horse came back without a driver.

Backus, of this city, because of alleged statements on the Irish situation made by him at the Democratic convention at Springfield yesterday, was unanimously adopted by the Boston Central Labor Union today.

CITY WILL HONOR CHARTER DRAFTER

Program for Celebration of Andrew H. Green's 100th Birthday to be Arranged Today.

JOSEPH HAAG IS CHAIRMAN

Mayor Hylan, In Tribute to Green's Civic Work, Calls Him "Father of Greater New York."

The civic work of the late Andrew H. Green, which culminated in the chief constructive part he took in the creation of the Charter of Greater New York, will be officially recognized by a celebration by the city on Oct. 6, the one hundredth anniversary of his birth. Acting on a resolution from the Aldermen, Mayor Hylan has appointed a memorial committee to arrange the details. It will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Council Chamber in the City Hall.

The Mayor said: "Many members of the committee will take a deep personal interest in doing honor to the father of Greater New York because of their relation to the work of that truly great municipal statesman. To him the city and the State of New York are indebted for the creation and promotion of institutions which are landmarks in our civic progress and enduring monuments of Andrew H. Green's practical interest in the welfare of our people.

"It is well that we pause occasionally in the tumultuous onrush of public and private affairs, to give greater thought to those gone before to whose wise initiative and unselfish championship of public projects we are indebted for the stature of our municipal achievements. The great things, moral and physical, that we see about us are not the product of spontaneous generation. They must have been greatly projected by the prophetic mind, and usually spring from some individual who looks ahead of his immediate time, and who has the soul and the daring to force his dreams to realization.

"Thus Andrew H. Green struggled and plodded sedulously and honorably forward until his early dream of a greater New York was, in its primary aspect, realized. To him we are chiefly indebted for the grandeur, prowess and unity of a consolidated city. It is for us to use this civic instrumentality for doing our part in gradually building up this great city so as to carry out its vast potentialities for higher public service."

The Executive Committee named by the General Committee of citizens consists of Joseph Haag, Chairman; Albert C. Henschel, Vice Chairman; Francis P. Bent, Secretary; Jacob A. Cantor, Dr. George F. Kunz, Willis Holly and John F. Sinnott.

Jews Urge Recognition of Soviet.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 19.—Delegates from many States attending a meeting of the Jewish Co-Operative Society of America here today, adopted resolutions calling on the United States Government to free all political prisoners and to recognize the Soviet Government of Russia. Committees were appointed to organize and conduct additional co-operative stores in all States of the Union for the purchase and sale of necessaries.

What are

This is important

IF you have bonds safely tucked away in your safe-deposit box the following misfortune may happen:

The corporations which issued the bonds may retire certain bonds by number at some fixed future date. An advertisement to that effect will be printed in small type in the newspapers. Unless you chance to see the advertisement your first knowledge that your bonds have been "called" will come when your next coupons are returned to you unpaid. Meantime you have lost the interest on your principal.

Another point to consider:

You may own certain stocks on which the issuing corporation decides to offer "rights" to subscribe to new stock at advantageous prices. If you are away from home this valuable information might not reach you promptly. It would be too late to take advantage of it.

Recently a well-known Corporation offered its old stock-holders new stock at par value ($100)—the market value then being $170 a share. The corporation reports that a very considerable number of old stock-holders failed to respond. Such oversight is hard to account for, because "rights" have a salable value.

The above money losses may be avoided by an arrangement with the Columbia Trust Company for the care of your securities under what is known as a

Safe-Keeping Account

This service operates as follows:

You bring us your securities. We give you a receipt for them. We list them in books of record and lock them in our vaults. We collect the income from them the day it is due and credit the amount to your checking account. Or, we will remit to you, as you direct.

In addition, a Safe-Keeping Account would relieve you of all trouble in

1. The making out of Income Tax Certificates.
2. The clipping and prompt collection of coupons.
3. The collection of dividend checks.
4. The collection of mortgage interest and watching tax payments, if desired.
5. Prompt action where stock-holder's "rights" are concerned.
6. The prompt presentation and collection of maturing bonds, or those called for redemption.
7. The collection of income from other sources.

If you are interested in this worry-saving, economical service, we suggest you secure further particulars. A Vice-President or Manager in charge at any one of our offices will be glad to talk with you.
